I bought a spectrum analyzer at a hamfest that I use as a panadapter for my RX340. Usually it is connected to the first IF (45.445 MHz), and I use a broadband amplifier to bring the very low-level signal up so the spectrum analyzer can use it.

I haven't found the other IF outs to be all that useful for a panadapter.

BTW, I paid about $200 for the spectrum analyzer -- it's not all that expensive a way to go.

3950 and the Liberty Net

There are a few facets of amateur radio that have attracted me enough to induce me to participate in them. One of those is the Liberty Net and the related discussions that take place on or around 3950 kHz lower sideband.
So many amateur contacts are empty and meaningless, an exchange of signal reports or technical descriptions of the most rudimentary sort. Such is seldom the case for the discussions that take place on 3950.

Every Saturday night at 9:00 PM Central Time, the Liberty Net begins and usually runs until the wee hours of the morning. W1WCR, Victor Misek, is the net control operator, and his commanding signal spans the continent and beyond with perfect intelligibility. In addition, Vic's array of Beverage antennas (he is the author of the Beverage Antenna Handbook) allows him to receive signals through noise and interference that would stymie most operators, and relay important information to the rest of the net participants.

The Liberty Net is a formal current events discussion net, taking on political and social issues usually distorted or covered up by the controlled mass media, and has been in operation for three decades. Any amateur willing to follow net protocol is welcome to join. You need not agree with other participants. The only stations not welcome on the net are a few inveterate jammers who have made themselves obnoxious by purposely interfering with the frequency on numerous occasions.

The Liberty Net operates formally only on Saturday evenings, but almost every evening you will hear some of the Net participants engaging in informal, free-spirited, and free-thinking discussions of important issues on the frequency. When intentional interference is present, sometimes the participants shift to 3953, 3947, 3947.5, 3950 USB, or other nearby frequencies.

Sadly, there are some sick individuals who spend a great deal of their time trying to prevent the legitimate operators from having these conversations. In some cases, they claim to be "outraged" by the legitimate participants' non-PC opinions. But regardless of their justifications, there is no legal sanction for the intentional interference created by these radio outlaws. This they have engaged in by transmitting music, noise tapes, tape loops or recordings of previous conversations or comments, monologues, obscenities, and other illegal interference. While there are a few unidentified jammers, the major sources of illegal interference are well known: WA9KJI, K5BLB, W9ART, K5ZU (now dead), K5MVK and KK7HO have engaged in malicious interference which is documented in a series of .wav file sound recordings linked here. There are many more recordings than the ones I have digitized and made available here. Some of these are archived at the FRG9600 web site.

Until 1992, when WA9KJI began jamming in earnest, 3950 was a relatively peaceful 75-meter frequency where iconoclasts and traditionalists of many non-establishment worldviews could have intellectual, religious, political and philosophical discussions. It was unique. It was the highest-IQ frequency on amateur radio. It still is, when the moronic jammers with their filthy language and noise-maker tapes are absent.

I have come to the conclusion that for many (though not all) of the jammers, their objection to the regular 3950 participants is not mainly political or philosophical, but merely that the conversation is so far above their heads that they feel inferior -- and they have a yen to destroy whatever is superior to themselves, if they think they can get away with it.

They are similar to the animated garbage who throw rocks through the windows of cathedrals or museums or great mansions because even the street curs' dim consciousness can comprehend that these grand buildings are cultural manifestations of a world that they can never be a part of -- and they hate that, passionately.

I was testing a new antenna, we now can go pretty much anywhere on the

Darn, and it would have been my first CW QSL card too.... However, I think the chances that the postal service lost the thing are much slimmer than the chances that you really didn't mail it.

By the way.. Green Stamps? You got to be kidding... I haven't seen a store giving out green stamps since the 70's... You must still have green shag carpet in the shack and some plaid leisure suits in that closet if you think green stamps are going to impress me. Now vintage radio gear is nice, I've owned and repaired a some that dated back to the 50's myself, but dude you got to catch up a bit here. That much is obvious..

If code is eliminated the riff-raff that will overrun the bands will drive a lot of people out of amateur radio. It's bad now even with a 5wpm code.

Back when I got my license there was alot of technical discussions, experimentation and lot of hams improving their communication and technical skills. Now with 5 wpm, convertions are mainly about appliance operating, or how someone did something stupid and burned up their rigs, things just like you can hear on CB.

I think we'd all be interested in your answer to that question.

You need to ask your question to the retards in the CB group. Most of

No one is going to quit amateur radio because the code requirement was eliminated, maybe a couple might. It's the retards that will flood the bands afterwards that are going to drive good hams out of ham radio.

We already have one CB service, we don't need two.

No I don't post in uk.radio.amateur. That's someone else trying to steal

Used to be able to hear technical things, now all I got to listen

If they don't have to learn CW, they just don't study as much.

The more you study the better, but we have a lot of laziness out there. If the CW requirement goes away, no one but only the best candidates for licenses will still take time to learn it and be skilled. Everyone else will just talk on a mic like a CB'er.

He could get a part time job at a real radio station, learn the ropes a little, then he would have some experience for Omega one. He can learn how to operate a radio transmitter. Still his music selection can't be helped.

Ok, fair enough.

On the threads that you do choose to take a shit on, how do you choose them, and why do you leave some posts un-turded?

I think we'd all be interested in your answer to that question.

What is the average age of a ham, around 60??? It is a dying hobby. CW is dead. When was the last time someone's life was actually saved by the use of CW??? One can still study electronic theory without having to learn CW. Knowing or not knowing CW doesn't make for civilized conversation on the ham bands. Just listen to the liberty net.

LOL

It's hard to mess up a long wire, but if anyone can mess one up, Todd probably can.

I was really hoping Omega one would work out for Todd. So many things he has tried to do in his life have been failures, and I really wanted his pirate station to be success.

Nope, Nothing heard again.

I was really hoping Omega one would work out for Todd. So many things he has tried to do in his life have been failures, and I really wanted his pirate station to be success. Something for him he could be proud of, but no, it turned out to be another one of Todds failures.

Best figure out how to send it from another county, Wabbit. The post marks gave you away on the last one...

BTW, Wabbit. Postal Inspectors are sworn law enforcement officers with full arrest authority. If they pay you a visit I would suggest that you not run.
Oh, and Wabbit? If they come knocking with a warrant, answer the door. If you don't, they will kick it in. Stenger would LOVE to watch that!

The trouble with a code is that it is designed to keep people out. Once you've learned the 'secret' code, it makes you feel that you have something that you, and a select group of others can participate in.
Once you're up there, see how quickly you pull the ladder up.
Does a proficiency in CW make for a better operator? Yes, in a way. It shows a studious interest in the hobby and is a worth achievement but does it make a more courtious or interesting operator? Certainly not, and this group is witness to that.
"People who don't use code are lazy", What? Is that the only discipline available to allow someone to experiment with radio? Absolutely not!
How about learning electronics and building your own equipment? Is that a lesser or a greater achievement?
How about taking the hobby forward by progressing and leading cutting edge technologies? It was after all the amateur fraternity who brought this new fangled SSB phone mode. Were are at the dawn of a new digital age on all you people can do is look backwards and remain firmly rooted in the seventeenth century.
Come on, wake up and smell the 21st century.

More important is that Extras at least should have to prove they can solder, troubleshoot, and use test equipment do determine if a radio operator is or is not in compliance.

SSB is a period stain on the panties of radio communication. I hate SSB. I prefer narrowband FM, or AM even, for quality and lack of annying squawk. Baudot RTTY is fun too.

Make people build something to get the General license and make them show competence to where a two way or broadcast facility would hire them for the Extra.

How much CW do you hear on two meters? Not very much. CW is primarily a HF mode.

I couldn't resist. :-)

Exactly how does one use solder to determine if a radio operator is or is not in compliance?

Made my day.

There is this thing called a comma. We have three things here:

1. Solder.
2. Troubleshoot.
3. Use test equipment to determine if a radio operator is, or is not, in compliance.

Three separate activities.

Get a fucking life already. Most of you have been plonked to avoid reading this stupid shit. Ah, but English is a wonderful and bizarre language. The beauty of the sentence is that it can, indeed (ESPECIALLY with the commas) be read the way Bill brought up.

The way you have it written conjoins all three activities into one, which is applied to determining if the radio operator, etc, etc.

Here's a better way:

"More important is that Extras at least should have to prove they can solder, troubleshoot, and in addition, use test equipment do determine if a radio operator is or is not in compliance.

There are some other styles that could be used too, but just stinging together words separated by commas is begging for misinterpretation.
Perhaps you were absent that day.

"Unambiguous" is one of my favorite words. :-)

We should have the examiners measure the size of prospective HAM's dicks. That would get us back to the basics here that you've been preaching about.

Just goes to prove the point further - him and his ridiculous posts need to be "totally" ignored. Get these groups back to their purpose - or at least let this goof ball and his stupidity - drop off the face of the earth.
Slow Code hasn't proven a damned thing to say "he" is licensed and to

I agree. At least 100 wpm for Novice/Tech and something really hard for General and up. Don't laugh, it's been done.

Also, lets have them memorize the Baudot code, demodulate PSK31 by ear (no computers allowed) and launch at least one satellite into orbit.
They should be required to build an oscillator from a crystal set, erect a 200 foot tower all by themselves and change the tubes in a 1500 watt amplifier while it is running at full output.

Hams today are a bunch of weenies.

who passed the 20 wpm test by about .001 wpm

You won't. Just as with learning CW, you have a plethora of excuses that you attempt pass off as "reasons".

Not at all. I am willing to learn how to quote correctly. Once I learn how it is done, I will do it just to please you, Markie.

The same cannot be said concerning your stubborn unwillingness to use a spell check program OR learn CW.
You steadfastly refuse to do either. I am not lazy. You, on the other hand, are.

There is no "logic" to your comparison of YOUR laziness to my willingness to learn and adapt. I outshine you in this regard.

Your refusal to use a spell check program is but another exemplification of your unwillingness to adapt and move forward.

Unlike you, Mark, I learned CW because it was part of the procedure to obtain my upgrades. Using a spell check is nothing a third-grader cannot learn in a matter of five minutes.

Round file the excuses, Mark. Your plaintive whining is falling on deaf ears.

BTW...I rather enjoy seeing how you twist matters to suit your outlook on life. You really don't like being told that you are wrong, do you? It clearly upsets you, as evidenced by you resorting to profanity.

,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,

That is SO much hokum, Mark. First, I have no need to prove to YOU that I mastered CW. You are a virtual nobody and I owe you nothing. Zero. Zilch. Nada.
Suffice it to say I will be operating on the HF bands wherever and whenever I wish. Fortunately for the rest of us, you cannot do likewise.

Your third grade playground challenge that I should give my real name is yet another mark of bogus Machismo. Besides, you seem to be convinced that I am Lloyd, so I'll leave you to your reverie.
I would think that you of all people would have by now learned the value of remaining anonymous. Were it not for you so boldly posting your name and callsign as you dump on literally EVERY post, it is likely that you would not have received the alleged box full of kiddie porn that you seem to think was sent you by a certain party in West Virginia. Again, we have only YOUR claim that this happened and, for all we know, this is yet another of your wild fabrications and perhaps even a tawdry attempt on your part to disparage someone with whom you do not get along.

No, Markie, my real name and callsign shall not be forthcoming. Not by your childish challenge, anyway. No, I am not "afraid" to do so, I am simply more experienced and have more common sense than you. I'd rather see you as the recipient of spam and magazine subscriptions and whatever else you allege is being mailed you. You asked for it. Better you than me.

Hi Captain, you're responding to the fired Alabama pizza delivery boy Lloyd Davies.(NOVFP) He's been in a mental institution for beating up his own mother after she caught him stealing money from her purse. He has serious mental problems and was also busted for indecent exposure for fucking a pumpkin in public.

Alabama inbred? Perhaps. He even has his very own newsgroup.

alt.cocksucker.lardass.lloyd-davies

Here's a little info on him. He attempts to ruin every group he can, especially the radio hobby groups with his cross posted drivel.

It's no coincidence that he's jdwilds buddy. The two freaks have a lot in common.

Kevin has also been exposed as a scam artist who is stealing money from two estates and from the two Nazi organizations of which he is a part.
Add to that the fact that his wife is bi-sexual and is getting it from men and women; and the fact that Kevin locks himself in the bathroom and eats pickles when he doesn't want to throw the meat to his old lady

Wrong again, lowlife Steveo. He's no buddy of mine as you say. Just another in a long line who happens to know what a complete piece of shit jackass you are. If Captain Ozone is that naive not to see it, that's his problem.

Why do you anti-code test people always spew the same dumb ass arguments all the time? The repeaters went down hill after the code requirement was eliminated for use of those bands. Hardly anything technical at all. Most of the retards up there aren't moving forward tecchnically. What makes you thing the same thing won't happen on HF? It will happen there too. We'll have fewer quality operators.

You say the things you do just like all the other dumb it downers say, You think CW is preventing the growth of amateur radio, and it needs to modernize. The CW requirement isn't preventing the growth of amateur radio, Laziness is.

I know you're right, Requiring good operators will kill the service.

Hams just want to be appliance operators these days and they don't want license exams that will interfere with them getting to those appliances even though it means being less skilled. I don't see anyone modernizing like everyone says is happening. They just get their licenses and grab a microphone. What percentage of hams have a computer connected to a radio? Probably less than 30%. Hams don't want to modernize. Guess we just have live with inferior operators on the bands from here on out. Then again, maybe hams shouldn't be required to be knowledgable or have skills. Requiring skills and knowledge is too old skool. Everything must be outcome based these days, even licensing. It ain't like we have to help out in emergencies or anything. It's Quantity, not quality. We need more hams even if they aren't skilled.

Right. Eliminating the code requirement for the Tech license was a bad idea and it let riff-raff on our VHF and UHF bands. They need to require passing a CW test for the technician license again, or make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

I am sure that you have a legion of supporters in the quest for "quality hams". The problem of their silence probably lies in finding an agreement on the criteria for "quality". miki/k35454.

Morkie claims he was sent kiddie pron from West Virginia, said so twice.
Mork says his arch enemy sent it.

Mork is a liar. He wants others to think this happened but he lies.

Since his buddy lives two miles from the Ohio border it stands to reason that his Buddy would have stepped across the river to send any pron to obfuscate the return address.

Bottom line is that Mark lied and continues to lie. Mork didn't get any kiddie pron from Woger or anybody else. Mork MOrgan is a liar.

Mork cant prove it. says the postal cops have it. Easy out, Mork.

Everytime you people follow-up to Markie, he gets another post he can use to crap on the group again. If you ignore his posts we can reduce the number of his turds in the group by half because there will be fewer posts for him to crap on. So please people, work with me on this and we'll be able to cut the CRAP in RRAP.

offered $20 for a "not much in demand radio".

Slow Idiot:

You must be the most vile, degraded, despicable, disgusting pos (pos = piece of chit) which ever fooled their vec and obtained a license. You are disgusting beyond description. I pity your neighbors, I believe they have ALL had problems with you, I believe the police, sheriff and county officials in your county all know you. I bet your children despise you, if your wife is still with you--she is a saint! You are not just a lightweight idiot, you are a complete idiot. You do the name IDIOT! much service, you never cease to be complete and an ideal example of an IDIOT. I bet some here do not realize how much you tax the services of city, county and state with your ridiculous and childish behaviors, wants, fits, temper tantrums, generally foolish behavior, etc.

You would truly be a very funny joke, if you were not such an example of human depravity. You remind me of the disgust I feel when I see child molesters and people masturbating in public, drunks, hopeless alcoholics and drug addicts, disease infested whores, etc.

I would truly like to leave you with a picture of how disgusting, reviling, sick and putrid an individual I view you as, but mere words could never paint a proper and complete example. You are beyond words, you are beyond my most vilest visions of disgust, you are a pinnacle of chit!

Now, all that said, I think you are pulling our legs, no one could possibly be so disgusting and stupid--you are just pretending! <grin>

It doesn't take a damn bit of knowlege of electronics, radio, propagation or regulations to learn cw.
So how is cw gonna prevent the dumbing down of ham radio.
Why are you not stressing a need for better testing for technical competentcy to prevent the dumbing down?
There are a lot of engineers, technicians and hobbyists who allready know electronics who might be interested amateur radio, but don't have time or interest to fool around learning code. Once licenced some, maybe many, of these people would develope an interest in cw.

I personally know of very good 2 way radio techs - one who won't go for a ham license because of the code - the other has acquired his NO-Code Tech, but won't go any higher because he "doesn't" want to fool with the code. So, Code "may" be keeping out some otherwise good operators. CW alone - isn't "dumbing" down - ham. It's the "STUPID MANUALS". With them, you don't "need" electronics, just the ability to learn a few "one liner" answers. Almost amounts to a mouse in a maze smelling cheese to direct it. PUT SOME TEETH back into the "THEORY". Some of the bozos I've met - can't tell the difference from a fuse and a resistor. That is pathetic.

If you "choose" "just" to BS - CB is the way - and it too "can" be a good hobby, if you don't have to contend with a lot of the same CRAP - of everyone splattering, constantly saying Audio, keying up just to piss people off, and so on. IF you choose to "LEARN" - Ham "can" be the way. But then again, even at this point, I know some CBers who know more than many No Coders - or even Extras for that matter. There "are" some "serious" CBers out there who "get into" their equipment - knowledge wise. They have a "desire" to learn. There again, they won't go ham BECAUSE of the code. It is a two sided coin - but regardless - both CB AND HAM - have a lot of "nice" folks and a lot of idiots - who - "could" be better operators if they tried. These Ham tests - do "not" test the "psychological" make up of people.

Code is ok - but it's not the salvation of the world - and certainly not the Ham hobby.

Still again - SC has "YET" to show proof of a license to back up his claims. People need to "ignore" him and move on.

People have only so much time and energy to spend on ham radio or anything else. Spending hours on CW is truly dumb when they could be spent on aspects of the hobby that are really important.

Knowing how to operate and apply EZNEC is a magnitude

He never did, the problem I have with NIM Busters is that the Admin does not want to take the responsibility and maintain control over his board. I don't post on that board, nor do I want to associate myself with those indivivualsor that stupid ass board. I am in the process of shutting them down for posting my picture on that board, a picture that was copyrighted. For allowing indivivuals to make death threats against my life. What really sick is that these indivivuals and the ISP that the site is on, believe that that type of behavior is protected by the First Amendment, when in fact is is not. You can not copy peoples pictures without the persons permission, Nor can you legally make threats on people lives over interstate telephone lines.

3447. Ham radio will die a slow ugly death when CW is eliminated.

There are a lot of people that don't see the value of being a skilled communicator in all aspects of communication. When cw is eliminted they will run for a license, and bring their bad lazy habits with them.

Been there, done that!

I just looked at the license requirements as likened to the responsibility of owning a dog. If you are going to own a dog, you are going to pick up some poop! Code is much the same to owning a station, as poop is to owning a dog, it's almost a 1:1 correlation.

That's my analogy too. I've always seen that operators and the bands are like owning a horse. You get some good operators that will do everything they can do to be good communicators that will work to improve on their knowledge, skills and are willing to help others be better operators too. Their efforts like a work horse carry ham radio to new places. (me)

But not everyone wants to be valuable to the service and a good operator. They are like turds stinking up the bands making them unpleasant and stagnant. They don't care to be skilled, or if anyone else is skilled and knows anything either. They prefer the smell of turd. They get a license and plop on the bands like a horse turd plops on the prairie.(you)

It is a 1:1 correlation.

SC

3490. CW IS ham radio. It's about communication and learning.

But you people that want to rid the service of the code requirement, fail to see the value. Sure have to learn CW make take a little time, but once you learn it and you it, you'll develope a better appreciation for what it means to be a ham, and our history.

To clarify, the service won't acually die, the number of people will increase, but those operators are undesirables because they don't feel it's worthwhile to have to know or learn anything to be a radio amateur.
They won't care for good operating practices either and ham radio will start to sound like 11 meters. Good hams will leave the polution that will start to choke the bands and nowhere will you be able to find a technical discussion. As ham radio transforms into CB style communication it's a slow and painful process, but eventually, only Lids will be left in ham radio, and they'll all be happier than pigs in slop.

you. Just look at all the hate on eleven meters. Those people are even Hardly a "culture", Mork. CW was part and parcel (still is) of advancing a licensee (through incentive/reward for effort), onward and upward to the earned priveleges of expanded band use.

You rail, indeed moan, that you should be afforded the same priveleges as those who have earned their just rewards while your desire is to sit back and wait for the priveleges to be handed to you.

The only imagined damage that has been fomented toward you by CW advocates is that they oft call you on the carpet for expounding day after day that Ham Radio should not be "dumbed down" to meet your selfish wishes. You take umbrage that they have the "gasp!" audacity to refute your weak arguments.

Life's a bitch, ain't it, Mark? Why should anybody have to work for anything?
It's like saying they don't deserve it.

entirely a culture you prove it effort at Code does NOT guantee a person advancement I KNOW that wasted years on the mode when I could have been no I want the license requirements to reflect valid regulatory pruposes Code test does not apear to do nor can anyone explain how the FCC and the PUBLIC are benifited by retaining code testing

No relationship exuist or at least No relationship has been shown to exist between inteligence and code ability, nor has any been shown WRT making someone a better operator refute ? If you could refute them I would support continued code testing dispite it effect on me

at times

there you show you are lying wether you are lying to me or yourself I can't tell

I have spent far more effort than most Code test @0wpm hams have and have nothing to show for it nor if I soehow manged to pass a seriously accomdated code (something that might just possible in my case) I still would nothing usefull for my efforts

> It's like saying they don't deserve it.

no what you are is saying that you don't know what your shoving and coming back to title

that the claim Cw is ham radio is Bullshit

it say that the first hams were NOT hams at all since they they did not use CW they used Spark

In all reality, truth be known, the "nuttiest" of posters herein is most certainly Mark himself.

Mark has ample time to post to these newsgroups...look at his timelines.
That bespeaks volumes.

Look at the posts made by others and then compare them to the posts made by Mark. Clearly Mark has far too much time to whittle away. His home life is quite obviously lacking anything of interest.

Usenet is Mark's entire life. He lives for it, breathes it, and is a sad result of same.

So sad, he is.

The Indians use to communicate with smoke signals. Learning smoke signals should be mandatory. This would separate the men from the boys. Smoke signals are not dependent on electricity. You can use a match or rub two sticks together. This is the only reliable way of passing messages when all else fails.

Hey:

Everybody knows if you were in a plane crash and the mic for your vhf am radio broke, you could always key the transmitter and send morse to convey your SOS. So, what you propose is very logical, also have the radio operator learn smoke signals! Then, if not only the mic was busted, but also the radio itself was busted, you could build a fire, take your coat and send your SOS!

You fit in here rather well! They like that thinking! <grin>

In that case he would have to take out his pocket knife, hollow out a from the hide, dry the hide, stretch the hide over the hollow log and send "drum signals."

Of course, if he didn't have a pocket knife he would be up the river...

Hmmm. Maybe better to forget the smoke and drum signals and toss morse

Nope, being accused of molesting Boy Scouts did it for me.

Everything that K4YZ/KTN4GN says is suspect and needs to be scrutinized.

For example, his Civil Air Patrol FOUO letter that was published in the Nov 2006 issue of PopComm completely contradicts his QRZ.COM/K4YZ offer to confirm his CAP communications.

That is what this thread is about... if you'd care to stay on topic.

> Just look at all the hate on eleven meters.

I wouldn't know, but there's no need to look there. The hate is already on RRAP, and K4YZ fosters most of it. When this group becomes moderated, I expect K4YZ to be banned. He'll have to hang out on the Nurse or CAP yahoo groups of his own creation and moderation.

What a coincidence. K4YZ has offered to "meet" several hams at the Dayton Hamfest, and there's a lot of hamfest parking at the shopping mall.

Dear MP,

Please pull your friggen head out of your ass and use your brain for once.

Smoke signals are a line of sight form of communication and you can't see them at night unless the fire is extremely large, and smoke signals don't work well in natural disasters like huricanes and tornados. Blind people can't see them either, they can only smell the smoke.

CW works well all the time, unless you're too lazy or dumb to learn it.
In which case you'll probably want to stick to playing with your matches and smoke bombs.

You Earned that right too, when you passed the 20 wpm code test, and you should flaunt it around like I do. Here are some ideas I like:

No-code hams should have to stand up salute when you walk into a room, even ones in wheelchairs.

You get to sit in a chair at club meetings and if all the chairs are taken you can make a no-code or nickel ham sit on the floor.

First in line for the refreshments, ahead of the 13wpm hams and the nickel hams is always nice too. Don't forget your cattle prod.

73 to you my extra class friend, you earned it. Everyone else these days just wants a welfare handout license.

> Danny,

I know what you mean Dan. With the anticipation that ham radio is going to get dumbed down again real soon, the dumb-it-downers like Lenny, Markie, Opus and a few others are really trashing the groups with anti code test hate. We can only hope the code requirement is retained and increased so that they can't get on HF and mess that up too.

ROFL,

Markie, you loser. You, Lenny, John, Ham & Cheese and the whole lot of ya, all got nothing better to do then try to figure out who everyone is, when you all should be trying to make ham radio a better place. What a bunch of looneys. LOL!

Lets just say the microphone on your HF rig breaks during an emergency and you don't have a spare. The ham that knows CW can keep communicating.
The ham that doesn't know CW is going to die.

If you want to go slightly higher tech you could use a Heliograph. Of course they don't work at night either or on a cloudy day but the signal can be directed like a beam antenna.

These CW vs The World arguments are amusing, kind of like old programmers claimimg BASIC is the only way to go, or old database guys who would claim that flatfile databases are better than SQL.

Give Morkie a few minutes. He lives for Usenet and will, within mere seconds, drop a Mark Morgan Loaf of fertilizer on all messages.

kookathon on clockwork

Ironic, is it not? A man who spends most of his waking hours and spewing hundreds of posts weekly on Usenet declares others to be "kooks"?

There is something very wrong with him.

Allow me to try to properly spell your own words, Mork. Like a moth to a flame. You simply cannot resist, can you? You are predisposed to, as Slow Code says, "dump" on each and every post made herein. You just cannot help yourself. You obviously have far too much time on our idle hands.
Apparently my previous post hit Baby Mark on the soft spot on his jumbled head. Your rejoinder was almost decipherable...almost.

And again, as in posts previous, you challenge me to give my callsign as "proof" of my existance. For what? Your third grade bent on Machismo? That is lame, Mark, even for you.

I'll give you my callsign, Mark. Meet me on 17M sometime...legally. I'll give my call every ten minutes as required. In fact, Mark, I am not all that far from you, so chatting on 17M even when the band is down should be easy to do. We can chat there...

Oh, and if r.r.a.p. has turned into a cesspool, look no further than your own mirror. You are part and parcel of the ruination of this group. In fact, Mark, you are the MAJOR reason this group has so sadly deteriorated.

Alexander Graham Bell.
CW tested and FCC approved.
callsign to be divulged on 17 meters....

nor can he spell his insults correctly if he is going to attack my spellinghis should be beyond repaorch

In a lot of areas - the FIRE DEPTS. don't approve of OPEN BURNINGS - so I guess that means that you would have to get the local fire depts. blessing prior to your disaster to use smoke!

Reference to the subject - if one did not want to use pure CW (if there is a mental or physical block from learning it) - there are other digital signals that could be used, i.e.:PSK31, etc.

Other line of site communications could be - focused white light beams, Lasers, flags, etc.

I think the real issue is that you and some of your friends are just plain against CW, (and you want to turn everybody else in that same direction), you don't use it, you don't want to learn it, etc. If that is the case, then why don't you just drop it - QUIT NAGGING LIKE AN OLD LADY - and go onto some other subject or project?

Correct, SC would die. He wouldn't have the sense to use the microphone.

I learned it. I passed it. I see it as irrelevant government hurdle to be passed. It serves no regulatory purpose in the ARS. No other mode has a stand alone exam that denies access to HF.

Fantastic organization. Lots of activities. I'd recommend boy/girl/venture scouting to any youth. Keeps them busy and they stay out of trouble and off of drugs.

Len is trying to make amateur radio a better place. Haven't you read his comments to the FCC?

By your own definition, you are a bad ham, Dan.

A few regulars have passed away, others have been run off or shot themselves in the foot.

Larry Roll did it to himself as an HR student posting racist comments.

Steve ran "Cutie Boy" off.

Mike Deignan wanted to tell everyone how it was, but neglected to curtail his own greed in the callsign collection business.

His Coast Guard partner snagged a Guam call, having never been to Guam.

W3RV self-confessed a his entry to amateur radio was via the NO-TICKET route.

Coslo went on to create a BBS so that he could exclude Len from commenting. So far no word of his BBS, and the hate Len crowd has reappeared on RRAP. The BBS thing, if actually created, was probably a flop.

Kim left when Bruce wouldn't stop the sexual inuendo.

Bruce left when Jim Miccolis said he wasn't very bright.

Heil overcame his embarassment of working out-of-band Frenchmen on 6 meters, and is now one of your "not so good hams" but he's still got his A-1 Operators certificate. He's even contemplating running for the Roanoke Division. That election just closed out, and he didn't get elected.

Then there is Robesin. He'll keep posting his sickness until it costs him a career or some jail time. He can't help himself. He also posts as Mark and others.

John, you are forgetting basic theory:

All electronics works by means of smoke.

If the smoke leaks out, it won't work!

All I'm doing is expressing a desire to END the code test for any US amateur radio license. I couldn't possibly end the mythical megal mood of fantasy-wanting hams dreaming of Saving the World via CW.

Don't forget his continued claim of "getting any [personnel] job he wanted" as a "summa cum laude" student"...then not being able to get any new job other than bus driver...

Now now, Brian, Jeffie is a Chiefie Petty Officer and a LECTURER at a university! [OK, an instructor at a junior college...]

I still like the part where he left his "hormonally-charged" prom date on the porch while he fled home to use his newly-acquired ham license! :-)

It wasn't a "BBS" but just a Blog thing, a forum for commenting.
It didn't get far off the ground and is presently just wasting ISP space.

It's all a part of his heroic "hostile actions" lifestyle. Enough hot air and personal insults to reach the "edge of space" far beyond what the Coslonaut was able to do... :-)

Now we have Blowcode...who resembles Deignan somewhat, as if he is trying a new writing style and multi-posting the same diatribe everywhere like a good "RF Commando"...the same old, cliche'-ridden shit seen for decades out of New England.

All those Coders seem to inhabit some kind of fantasyland.

Those comments don't make me think that Len is trying to "make amateur radio a better place".

How would banning anyone under the age of 14 years from having an amateur radio license "make amateur radio a better place"?

> All I'm doing is expressing a desire to END the code test for any US > amateur radio license.

No, :Len, that's not all you're doing on rrap.

Tell us how amateur radio is being ruined by hams 13 years of age and under, Len.

Tell us why it's OK for you, a non-amateur, to try to change the regulations, but not OK for someone from outside your neighborhood to try to change the zoning ordinances.

OTOH, Len may be helping amateur radio in two ways:

1) By staying out of it - his license is still in the box.

2) By spamming the FCC with so many hundreds of wordy pages of comments, reply comments, and general diatribe, he may have actually delayed the process of eliminating Element 1.

Jim provides the following to OPDX about his QSLing and his operation for VQ9-land: "All direct mail QSLs received at my Florida QTH as of November 10th have been answered. My XYL is holding the mail received after that date, and those requests will be answered after I get home. Bureau cards received as of November 10th have also been processed and will be mailed to the Outgoing Bureau prior to leaving the island. (All QSL requests go via the home callsign, ND9M.) Ops need to remember that IRCs referred to as 'Beijing Model 1' will expire at the end of December 2006. QSL requests containing those IRCs that are received too late will be answered by the bureau. (The new design is easily identified by the shiny hologram label on the front and is valid through 2009.) I've been active from VQ9 for eight months out of the past year, and so far logged 26,000 QSOs. CW accounts for 85%, with SSB at 13%, and 2% were using digital modes. About 40% have been on 20m, 20% were on 15m, and another 20% were split between 30 & 40m. Considering what propagation conditions have been like, I'm quite pleased with the results..... 73, Jim, VQ9JC / ND9M / KG4JC"

3601. Nessie voted as Britain's best known Scot leads to a suggestion of comsuption of too much Crabbies Green Ginger Wine

If you think Nessie is Britain's best known Scot then I'll have some of what you are drinking GOOD news for the Loch Ness monster which has just been voted the best known Scot in Britain despite the fact that a) she is a monster of uncertain nationality, and b) she does not exist. Minor quibbles, I think you will agree.

So how come Nessie topped this prestigious poll? Some clue may come from the fact the survey was conducted by the maker of Crabbies Green Ginger Wine, a potent brew favoured by those unruly types within our society who like to get off their heads quickly on cheap sweet booze, or pensioners, as I like to call them.

One can only assume that many of the respondents had partaken of the drink before questioning. I don't know if you have ever tried drinking a couple of bottles of Crabbies on the bounce but, let me tell you, if you do, the appearance of monsters in the room, while very likely to occur, is the least of your worries.

As usual the survey's conclusions have been dismissed, largely on the grounds that they are the opinions of the general public.

One critic even derided the poll as another example of our preference for vacuous celebrity over men or women of real achievement. How Nessie, who has never been spotted at all, never mind spotted emerging from a nightclub while flashing her nether regions, can be regarded as a witless celebrity is beyond me. There again I do not believe in Britney Spears either.

Funny how you like to "out" other's calls on RRAP, Brain, but are too cowardly to sign your own to posts.

You mean his fusillade of "Reply Comments" attacking the AUTHORS of other comments...?!?!

Yes, Brain, we've seen them.

Up to 21 on one docket alone.

Others continue to embarrass themselves with their "Do As I Say,
Not Do As I Do" rhetoric, such as yourself, Morkie, etc etc etc.....

Larry just tired of dealing with idiots. Considering your persistence in BEING an idiot, Brain, he may ahve had the right idea.

Nope.

Cutie boy left of his own volition. And who needed him? He was a Canadian Morkie.

And that he had those calls negates the truth of his comments herein...HOW...?!?!

Kinda like how you "snagged" a /T5 call without any documentation...?!?!

The "hate Len" crowd is everyone except the other Feeble Fivers, and look what THEY represent... ! ! ! ! ! !

His "embarrassment"...?!?!

This coming from "I Was DX In Somalia" who can't produce a SINGLE DOCUMENT that even REMOTELY proves he legally operated so much as an ISR radio in-country...?!?!

Ahhhhh, yes....Now Brain just out-and-out lies.

I am sure Mrs Brain is proud to be married to such an upstanding truth.

None of my groups are moderated, Morkie...I mean Brain. Sorry.

The only "moderation" any of them get's is making sure they are not spammers...After that they can post freely.

I've suggested you read any of the archives you'd care to, but you've obvioulsy never done that.

Now here's all the newsgroups that Morkie added in...

Why?

I don't post to any of them except on rare occassion and then only about Amateur issues.

From Morkie's reply:

"rec.radio.amateur.policy,rec.radio.cb,rec.radio.amateur.misc,alt.military.cap"

What does it matter, Brain?

You don't sign YOUR call here!

You unceremoniously dropped your "billybeeper" personna for "hot-ham-and-cheese", trying to hide your identity until your ego overcame situational awareness and you did sign a post.

I can't help but wonder which one of the other annonnies may be you and when the people saw the queen/king of knob jobs known as Lloydie there was great ridicule and laughter, and the land was blanketed by a smoky haze as the men lit 10,000 fires and cooked man-meat so that there could be a barbecue feast for the fatassed pizza boy, since cocks is what the fatassed pizza boy usually dined on and the women were all hoping that the king of knob jobs in Alabama would chose to do 'The Stroke' with his tiny clit instead of boring them with his talk of timelords, star trek and daleks. And many of the women swooned over the stench of the shit and piss smell of the king of knob jobs in alabama, and some others of course grew nauseous in their stomach regions from just looking at the genetic defect.

And nobody was jealous of the fatassed pizza boy from colder climes and read of his stupidity from the land of nod and Alabama who was frustrated, and it provoked more anger and envy from the king, and he pounded his cheap assed big lots desk, and some pounded their desk and threw large objects and his filthy HUD apartment carpeting was given more semen stains. The fatassed king of knob jobs in Alabama had to drain his meager bank account. And he feared that he would be banned from the INTERNET because of his stupidity.

and meanwhile in the land of nod and Alabama the men cooked man-meat on fires and drank beer and sucked cock with the king and the king did the Electric Slide on Rev. Al Sharpton's long dong.

and for the king of knob jobs in Alabama it was all good.......

No, he would live. He would remove the broken key, and send the message by shorting the wires together. Code hams are always able get the message out. That's why pro-coders are so important to ham radio.

It's a ham radio group. Ham op's are the most inmature bunch of spoiled tightwads you'll ever want to meet. They are even worse than the stinky bunch of old pathetic white men that show up for model railroad swap meets and train show flea markets.

Believe me when I tell you, you can find any and all varieties of white trash at any hamfest so expect the same, and even worse in the ham radio NG's.

I mean we are talking about people who have been known to send human fecal matter and dead mice in gift boxes to people via the US Postal Service or toss anti-freeze contaminated meat scraps in the yards of people they don't like with pets.
Both the above examples took place during the infamous 20 Meter net wars from years ago and you can be sure that there are those who wold do the same stuff again today if given the chance.

at least the former still goes on at we we think what was sent to N9ogl was human shit

also some of them like to send snuff kiddy posrn with other hams reutn address (although mailing em in defferent states than the either the sender or receiving is something of a givaway false accastion of rape and child molesting made to LW is also part of the stock in trade

It's going to get a lot worse after the CW requirement is eliminated.

No, the bands are going to get worse over the long haul. We got people that don't want to be skilled knowledgable hams. If they're too lazy to learn CW they are going to be too lazy to learn other things too. Technical discussions will decline. It will start to sound like CB.

I give ham radio fifteen years after the code requirement is eliminated to totally get there, but it will be noticable that it's going downhill quality wise within the first five years.

Just listen to the no-code ignorance on repeaters, you don't think thats no going to migrate to HF?

OK, Mark. Let's see if you can get off your dyslexic ass and join Roger in trying to figure out who I am.
Big HInt. I am NOT Steve.
Another Big Hint...I am NOT Roger, either.

I am most certainly NOT No Code, so that leaves you without suspects.

Oh, and Mark? We most certainly know that your claim of being a Geophysist

You sit on your unemployed arse day in and day out and flood the Newsgroups

The way I understand our constitution, a man creates a debt to society with crime, once he pays this debt he is to have his rights restored; this keeps society from creating dangerous and dark forces through abuses of its' citizens. While I do believe special arguments can be made of the type of crime a criminal commits, child molestation, premeditated murder, rape, etc., in most instances the above should be followed. I think one clue is the statement in our constitution, paraphrased here, " ... endowed with unalienable rights by his creator ..." This is best seen when one applies thought and sees that any tampering with such rights immediately infringes upons ones rights to the "pursuit of happiness", freedom and access to those resources granted us by our creator.

I am no attorney, however, I suspect that could only be made to work against felons who are incarcerated or on probation/parole.

Still, the logic fails me of why you would ever revoke someones license who had been convicted of, say, a felony regarding bank fraud--felony drunk driving--manslaughter--etc. This type of logic, once again, demonstrates why I hold such a low esteem for some in amateur radio.

Most likely, in all cases, if the criminal had spent more time in the hobby aspect of radio his desire to commit a crime would have been diminished! Best we help this criminals before society suffers, rather than punish them after the fact (and someone ends up without his/her property, or worse, dead!)

From the European perspective, I do not understand this discussion.
Most European countries (except Russia) removed the CW requirement after a few months of the ITU WRC decision that CW test is not required at frequencies below 30 MHz.

I haven't observed any problems with persons using the HF bands without the CW test.

Listen for yourself, can you tell which European operator has passed the CW test and which one has not passed the test.

I understand. I don't have have a problem with that aspect of the organization, and since it involved my children, I'd prefer to keep it the way it is. Adults can do what they want.

But is has nothing to do with the BSA. Robesin is not in the BSA and I wouldn't want him around my children or anyone else's. But he probably has lots of contact with Cadets; hopefully they're using at least the rule of two.

That's certainly one way to look at it.

Here's another, somewhat similar view:

An amateur radio license is not a right. It is a privilege, granted by a process that includes passing the required examinations and demonstrating that the licensee is trustworthy to follow the rules and regulations.

The FCC assumes that all license applicants are trustworthy, unless and until they prove they are not. Conviction of a serious crime is considered by the FCC to be an indication of not being trustworthy.

Note that the conviction is considered to be an indication, not proof.
License revocation is not automatic. The person whose license was revoked was offered the opportunity to show that they were still trustworthy in terms of an FCC license. But the person in question did not reply to the FCC's letter at all, so FCC had the license revoked.

> I am no attorney, however, I suspect that could only be made to work against > felons who are incarcerated or on probation/parole.

Maybe. OTOH, the argument that a license is a privilege and not a right might win out.

> Still, the logic fails me of why you would ever revoke someones license who > had been convicted of, say, a felony regarding bank fraud--felony drunk > driving--manslaughter--etc.

Because such convictions indicate a lack of trustworthiness. Or to put it another way, the ability to make good choices and control one's behavior. Someone convicted of felony drunk driving obviously has problems in those areas.

And note again that the revocations are not automatic.

> This type of logic, once again, demonstrates > why I hold such a low esteem for some in amateur radio.

It is the FCC, not amateurs, who make these decisions.

> Most likely, in all cases, if the criminal had spent more time in the hobby

Maybe.

It would be interesting to see the rate of serious criminality among licensed radio
amateurs compared to the general population.

You're talking prevention rather than punishment - and I agree.

Whoa! Let's be accurate! Radio frequencies are a "natural resource", granted us by our creator and the laws of physics he/she/it/"the-aliens" constructed. Why I will allow a gov't agency to manage these in a manner which is ultimately governed by "the people", I will not support laws, rules or regulations which run contrary to such ... or in short, the people control the use of the air waves, and the air waves are made available to the people in a very logical method.

> The FCC assumes that all license applicants are trustworthy, unless and
The FCC can assume anything it wishes, but I insist it obeys the constitution and the laws of the creator in doing so.

> Maybe. OTOH, the argument that a license is a privilege and not a right

I don't believe there is any argument of merit which can be proposed which would take radio frequencies from us, they are simply one of those "inalienable rights" our creator has gifted upon the peoples of this earth.
I would quite openly question anyones sanity who claim differently.

> It is the FCC, not amateurs, who make these decisions.
I live in America, I grew up when the constitution was not "interpreted", rather, we took it for granted our forefathers "said what they meant, and meant what they said."

I don't know if or when they dropped it), but the Soviet Union had a no code HF license starting around 1956. Japan also had one at one time.

From the point of view of the "DX", like you Paul, I'm glad that the low end of the 40m and 75 meter phone bands was extended. I PREFER SSB, a 20 meters has been open to the U.S. on "good days" for around 20 minutes.

Due to the influence of the Israel Amateur Radio Club, the code requirement has been kept. With the IARC's other policies, including operating events when relgious hams can't operate, pushing for a five year requirement to convert a foreign license for new immegrants, etc, they really have become the superfulous old man's CW club, dragging the hobby down with them.

Geoff.

I "suppose" they (the FCC) could consider a way of reinstating said license - much like any State Bureau of Motor Vehicles would for a person found DUI/etc - if proper conditions were placed into effect. I doubt that will ever happen.

Quite frankly, I don't see what "CB/Ham/2 way" radio in general - has to do with a "Felon" - UNLESS they were used in the commission of said crimes - which by the way - carries additional penalties.

I mean - if a person has it in them to kill someone - rob a bank, etc..... radio "didn't" drive them to it - unless maybe they're looking for cash to build a bigger station, etc. That is laughable. People commit crimes for various reasons. Money, Jealousy, definate Mental impairment which breeds anti-social behaviour - and so on. Was Hitler a "ham"? Probably not. Was Osama Bin Laden or any of his ass kissing henchmen? Probably not! I am willing to bet - the majority of criminals have had NO or very little exposure to radio - with exception of maybe CB and FRS - since they're so prevalent and easily used and acquired. But even at that - the aforementioned issues are mainly at fault and I'm sorry - I fail to see where "Radio" has anything to do with it.

I will agree with the one poster - had anyone "convicted" of a crime who "was" into Ham - been more involved in the hobby, it "may" have prevented said crimes. FWIW - crimes differ from state to state as to what may be considered as a "felony". What may be a felony in one state, may not be in yet another.
Then again - some people - regardless if it is "ham" radio, "CB", pick up games of sports, etc. - lose their cool so very easily - and BAM - a crime is committed. People have died at youth sports games when the "parents" went nuts and attacked others. You can't blame the "Youth" sports for those deaths - anymore than you can Ham radio for a crime. People are just going bonkers more and more now days and they use any little excuse to try to justify their cause.

Not only "Ham", but CB and FRS as well, AND even on a Police channel on the scanner - a couple times - I've heard people argue to the point of telling others - they were going to kiss their ass. Yes, I've heard COPS get into it on the radio. Talk about "professionalism"! Yes, I've heard of fights on Ham and CB where one person is "trying" to talk and another - instead of acting like a gentleman - acts like an ass - and whalah - an argument ensues. Instead of changing channels or letting the issue drop - they pursue it. Some - yes - to the point of personally hunting the other down for an ass kicking or murder. That is "rage" which was brought on - not by radio - but by those who have issues dealing with others - who don't like to be crowded. The radio was only a means of them asserting their behaviour publicly - and finding a victim. Not much different than Road Rage.

You can't pick "just" HAM RADIO out of the bunch - any hobby, sport, activity, job, etc - can set people off.
Conducting research to see how many hams committed crimes - would be "less" interesting than one which shows how many accidents were as a result of using all radio modes while driving - be they Ham, CB, 2 way, etc. - AS OPPOSED to CELL PHONE! I don't EVER recall seeing the states cracking down on CBers or Hams - due to "irratic driving" as they are now - with Cells.

With the heavy use of Cell Phones, I'd be willing to bet that Ham radio "IF" responsible for ANY crimes - is like maybe 1/1000th of a percent - compared to cells - which are used for harassment, stalking, spying, etc.
"Maybe" - just "maybe" - I could go along to some very minor extent - but for the most part - I DOUBT Ham is as responsible for crimes as this post seems to suggest. IF there are any "psychologists/psychiatrists" out there or "social workers" who read these, PLEASE DO - chime in. I'd love to see your opinion as well.

It's not "ham radio", CB, vehicles, etc..... it is SELF CONTROL - which makes the difference.

Other countries are not a problem. Personally I do not attempt to predict what will happen in the US. However some fear that with easy licensing and the lax enforcement here that there could potentially be serious problems. They fear a repetition of what happened to the Citizens Band here. With little to no enforcement of violations, that band became such a sewer that you don't dare let kids listen to it. Recently two CB operators got into a fight over the radio, sought each other out, and one was killed. It is not the world we fear but ourselves.

Gee, maybe you should save your money and buy your OWN home, then you can do what you want with it.
An even better experience would be, buy a home with your own money and rent it to those that think "Landlords suck assholes"
After a few missed rent payments your outlook will suddenly change, you will wonder why does that %^&$#^$ think I should support him. It's not my fault he lost
a job, got fired, car broke down, had to take the kid to the emergency room.
It's not my fault he didn't save any money for a rainy day!
My most fun story is the guy that replaced a mailbox, he was in the middle of being kicked out. He went out and bought a $40 mailbox expecting me to pay for it.
I told him to keep the mailbox. When he left he took the mailbox. The post for this mailbox was a buried telephone pole, it wasn't going anywhere.
When I installed my new $5.00 mailbox I mounted a 2"x6" board to the pole with 5" x 5/16" lag bolts, then I mounted the mailbox to the 2x6 with seven 3 1/4" drywall
screws.
I would have liked to seen his face when he whacked that mailbox and it didn't go flying away. I hope he didn't hurt himself, NOT He was gone about three days before he did this. I waited another week and put up a new mailbox.
Mike
PS. One day the toilet overflowed I had to remove about 40 kotex from the sewer pipe one cold day in January.

PSS. sold all the rentals no more %^&$#^$ to put up with.

You are quite correct (and unalienable is used.) I am guilty of "clumping" all of these together, including the amendments also ... I am guilty of being "pro-for-the-people" and quite lax about maintaining confines when it comes to their rights.

Still it is an important distinction that it is in the Declaration of Independence but not in the Constitution. And is it important to understand the differences in their purposes.

The Declaration was designed to explain to the world why the colonies wished to separate themselves from England. It was intended to elicit sympathy and support from the enemies of England and to convince England's allies to stay out of it. The majestic rhetoric of "unalienable rights" and "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" were geared towards those goals.

On the other hand, the Constitution was designed to define how we were actually going to govern ourselves. The rhetoric of the Declaration is inappropriate

Let us take liberty as a very simple example. If that were included in the Constitution as an "unalienable" right, we wouldn't be able to lock up serial killers.

Let's also take that "pursuit of happiness" in terms of radio spectrum resources. If each of us could operate whenever, where ever, and however we pleased because we had the right to pursue happiness, it would be utter chaos and very few would actually be happy. In the early days of radio, that very situation existed and it caused problems and thus was born the predecessor to the FCC.

In every group or society, some type of structure is necessary to enable the group or society to survive and thrive. This means that there are rules and regulations in almost everything we do affecting our daily lives. That by its very nature limits people's rights.

Yes indeed. There are two (in fact more) documents protecting our rights and agreeing people are the true power, and NOT governments.

Yes, and they did a very fine job of it. Indeed, I have not seen many papers which make humanity the reason for its arguments, and individual rights in particular. Some now wish to find reasons to weaken these premises and arguments, strange how societies can never rid themselves of fools destined to repeat the same mistakes ...

> On the other hand, the Constitution was designed to define how we were Absolutely NOT, while kings, rulers, dictators, powerful corporations, the wealthy, and the mentally challenged might confuse rights with rhetoric, those whose ancestral line runs back to these time, and the traditions carried forth to this time have no such confusions. There is no rhetoric in life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. There is not rhetoric in "God given rights." There is no rhetoric in being secure in person and property. You give me nightmares in the type of world you would allow to come. I only hope you never run for office, even dog catcher would worry me in your case! (however, you are probably a nice person)

> Let us take liberty as a very simple example. If that were included in the Preposterous, that is like arguing liberty = murder. We all have absolute liberty, granted by our creator, we govern ourselfs in its use. The people have that right, the government does not, unless it serves as only a tool of the people in doing so. There is much confusion here, laws do NOT give us rights and/or liberty, they only serve to remove or control those. Before we apply law, we are only governed by our creator, and he has given us all free will.

> Let's also take that "pursuit of happiness" in terms of radio spectrum

We all also have unlimited rights to the pursuit of happiness, limits on those pursuits are simply when they deprive another of exercising their rights to such pursuits. A child learns this early in school, a finer tutoring includes sharing ... if we deny others what we have, especially though little tests and requirements as a policy of picking and choosing "who we want to play with", we are NOT maintaining order, we are screwing people, plain and simple, in fact only a simple person would have difficultly seeing through that rubbish.

No Dee, you are simply another, "The sky is falling!", decrier. No Dee, the sky is not falling, some are simply made a prisoner to their own fears, fears which lead them into depriving other Americans of their rights--in so doing, the "champions of justice" end up becoming the evil which controls, deprives, and punishes people who do not think as they do. These groups have come and gone through our history.

Open your eyes, todays world is much different than the one which you were born into. Today you can call anywhere in the world from anywhere, if you are even in most remote areas a cell phone allows you such access; if that fails, there are satellite phone. Today, the internet will let you converse to anyone anywhere in the world, allow you to view and access materials anywhere in the world or share any such materials to anyone, anywhere in the world.

In this world, amature radio tries to keep itself isolated as an island, a religious club of fanatic devotes with far too many decrying the sky is falling ... the sky is not falling ... radio is dying.

The good news is, much awaits amateur radio's future from its' ashes. From those ashes will spring forth a service which will bear little resemblance to the old, antique and outdated practices of the past.

It is an exciting time to be alive ...

Warmest regards,
JS

I agree!

The problem is, they are a limited resource, to be shared among a lot of people.

For example, if each of us 300,000,000 Americans were to ignore the other six billion humans on earth, and divide up the HF spectrum equally, how much would we each get to call our own?
Less than a tenth of a Hertz on HF. Even if we allow time separation, so that 100 Americans share the same allocation, that's less than 10 Hz each.

Agreed - but who determines what the logical method is? What you see in radio regulations is a set of compromises among differing uses.

For example, I think there are some folks who would be happy to see amateur radio eliminated, or reduced in power/spectrum/privileges so much that it would effectively disappear. Those folks would rather see the amateur bands used for something else, like broadcasting, BPL, etc.
To them, ham radio itself is illogical.

OTOH, we hams think that polluting the radio spectrum with BPL noise is illogical. Yet we have to push and prod the regulators to understand that simple idea.

btw, this "character" issue isn't just aimed at hams. It was originally used against broadcasters.

Do you think each of us has the inalienable right to operate an uncoordinated transmitter on, say, 90.9 MHz? I don't, and I don't think you do either.

Think about why.

> > It is the FCC, not amateurs, who make these decisions.

> I live in America, I grew up when the constitution was not "interpreted",

The Constitution has always been interpreted. That's one of the reasons for the Supreme Court, and why it has struck down laws that contradicted their interpretation of the Constitution. Not a new thing.

And one of the greatest wisdoms of those who wrote and ratified the Constitution (near here, in Philadelphia, btw) was that it would not be a static, unchangeable document, but rather one that would evolve and develop over time. Yet at the same time, the amendment process was set up to try to keep changes from happening on a whim.

A pretty ingenious system, all told.

Exactly. And that safety means reasonable regulations, laws, and other measures to ensure order.

At the same time, we must be careful that we do not try to obtain "safety" at the price of our freedoms.

This is increasingly becoming a pipe dream, as more and more neighborhoods put together * CCA's or whatever they call them this week, and dictate what color paint you can have on your home, what sort of topiary, and countless other minutia. Covenant communities should be outlawed. Whatever happened to a man's home being his castle (i.e. personal property rights)?

Riley isn't doing his job?

I think what I wrote before one of the recent restructurings was, "What I fear most about eliminating the Morse Code Exam is a lack of enforcement, and what I fear most about maintaining the Status Quo is a lack of enforcement."

A lack of enforcement is a lack of enforcement, and a Morse Code Exam CANNOT be used as a substitute.

Be sure to collect evidence of USA violations and turn it in to Riley.
Don't just pass it to your OO.

out here in the great hinterland... more than an hour drive from any of the great 'blue' cities. you can still find land that is wild and free, where neighbors help you put up towers instead of putting them down, and the big question at a zoning bylaw hearing is if the new bylaw is meant to stop celular companies from coming into town... the question was asked because the person didn't want the bylaw to slow them down, because they couldn't get service now and wanted it!

No I'm saying that all our rights do have limits and that it is for a very good reason. If our rights were absolute, they would have no limits and we could indeed kill each other to attempt to insure those rights. Society has decided (and rightly so) that doesn't work too well for the survival of society. The moment society decides that some rules are required to make that society work, then our rights are limited.

Again if it were an absolute right, one could pursue that at the expense of others. Again society has decided that doesn't work too well and of necessity puts some limits on it. Then it becomes a matter of opinion whether those limits are appropriate.

It so happens that I think code is a basic of radio and should be required at a basic level. I do not consider it a filter, right of passage or other such nonsense.

Again, I'm not the one worried about it. I see people every month joining our ranks. If you look at the statistics, it is quite obvious that amateur radio is not dying. It has its ups and downs but the numbers are quite robust.

Since it's not dying, there won't be any ashes. I've seen the proposals so far and there is nothing exciting in them. Digital voice? Ho-hum, I've got that on my cell phone. And it can be implemented any time hams want to spend money on new equipment New digital modes? Sure but they're just new flavors of the same old thing. Hooking to the internet? Already been done and that's not terribly exciting either. Once upon a time, radio led technology (i.e. linked repeater systems with phone patches pre-date cell phones). Now it doesn't and there is nothing exciting in emulating commercial implementations in amateur radio.

Basically, radio is a mature field. As with any mature field, improvements can be made but that's about it.

The excitement comes in the personal growth and development and in helping others to discover those for themselves.

Actually, those conditions are already in place.

The person who had his license revoked could, after getting out of prison, apply for a new license and take the test over again. The application asks if the person has ever had a license revoked, so the person could give the details, and then say that s/he'd reformed and would follow the rules.

That revocation doesn't mean the person can never ever have a license.

The point isn't "Radio" - it's trustworthiness. At least that's FCC's point of view.

If a person has it in them to commit a serious crime, why should we trust that they will follow FCC radio regulations? That's FCC's point of view.

we are simply hearing about it more.

Being mostly a CW operator, I've not heard anything like that on the ham bands.

Of course. And ultimately it is the person who is responsible.

I think there's a basic difference with cell phones. With radio, it's one-way, with a phone, it's two-way. A lot of mobile radio is a roundtable-type discussion, where you spend only a small part of the time talking. And you can put the mike down when not talking!

Perhaps the biggest factor is simply popularity. There are less than a million US hams, and of those, the number actively operating mobile is a couple hundred thousand at most.

Compare that to the more than 100 million cell phones now in use....

My landlord was a no-code ham and he didn't want me to have an antenna because he didn't want me to have fun making CW contacts, so I slapped the shit out of him and now I have a 5 element tri-bander up 100 feet and I made him pay for it. When code is gone your going to see an in rush of lazy people that don't want to be good or skilled at anything, and their frustration over their laziness will be taken out on other hams on the bands. This will turn ham radio into CB.

I'd post my name and call but I don't want Mark in the Dark to mail me a turd. He does that to 20WPM code tested Extras.

Secretly, the ARRL would like to see the code requirement go away, but they can't display that outwardly because it will make them look like they are against having good skilled hams. Rest assured, when the code requirement is eliminated, the ARRL (Anti-Radio-Relay-League) with try to come up with a way to capitalize on the dumbing down of the service so they can get more money in the corporate bank account.

Yeah, you're right, I forgot about that - but then again, I've never been in a spot to "test" that! After I read your reply - I recalled some statements on various FCC forms regarding such.

I wonder if that is because - too easy to say it all "verbally" and well - with code - one wouldn't have quite as big an audience - therefore the aggressor wouldn't be able to make himself/herself look bigger when in actuality - we know it is the opposite. Most people don't copy MOST messages in code - or ANY for that matter - unless looking for the call to be next in line, wanting to join in, practicing copying code.

Yes, but the point is - the discussion was <somewhat> leaning towards a study of "criminals" in Ham radio! It is far easier to commit crimes with "cell"! AND as we all know - some people can't talk and chew bubble gum at the same time. I don't care if you're (meaning anyone) in a house, phone booth, or in your car with a cell phone - if you have a person who talks a lot with the hands, guess what is going to be happening as they're driving! The hands come off the wheel and whalah - lost control. I've seen people reading news papers and driving, watching TV, talking on their cells AND using the hands - a LOT. Women putting on make-up - no hands on wheels, etc. So - I'll not place "all" the blame on Cell phones - but rather the people who can't use them - shall we say - "safely".

That went away with all the other rights such as the right to use a telephone without fear of the government listening in (without a court order) and losing your pilot license if a neighbor gets pissed at you for something and calls homeland security and says you're a threat (no due process in that case, they just automatically yank it I'm told). Very sad to see such abuse of power. I think everyone should vote every elected official out at the next opportunity. Let's start with a clean slate and make the lousy reps get regular jobs like the rest of us.

"Dee Flint" <deeflint01@comcast.net> wrote in message

NO! The sky is NOT falling!

No Dee, "the people" are the gov't. Let me give you an example.

No one in his or her right mind would ever trust any president, representive, or group of them to decide whether an individual dies or not (or any other group of bueraucrats either!) We would only allow citizens to do that. It is called a jury and there are 12 of them to make sure they get it right (yes, I know, there are still far too many mistakes and DNA evidence has released a sizeable number from death row--perhaps with DNA evidence we can increase our accuracy a bit.)

Well, the FCC is just like that. And we should never trust them to make a really important decision for us. The FCC can only do its' job correctly if all 350 million of us are looking over their shoulders and telling them what to do. Trouble is, my president, senators and reps look a bit raggy around the edges, even to the point of making me think they are corrupt criminals. I am trusting they will get around to fix that soon ... <straight face>

If someone is a lazy ass laying around trusting their gov't to do it for them or for the other citizens, he or she is far from a great Amerian. A great American is always active in making sure the peoples voice is heard.

What makes America great is everyones' right to free speech, activism, protests, etc. It will all shake out in the end, any one mans/womans opinion, or even any one group of men and women is unimportant in the much larger picture.

In the final say, only the people have a right to place limits and they only need to place limits to keep one from infringing on another, but you already know that, our founding fathers documents could serve as no better example, they need no "interpretation" on what anyone person thinks they either are or are not--that is difficult enough.

JS

I know I am. What's that got to do with my opinion that I stated?
And people like you (I assume you say I'm full of shit for wanting to vote out deadbeats) keep voting the useless crumbs back into office, year after year. I will clarify a bit though...yes you still have a right to own your own home. You just might not be able to use it for what you want (does Michigan require land use permits?) If I want to put a private use runway on my property I have to get a permit and the county sends letters to all adjoining property owners to see if there are objections. To me, my airplane is a recreational vehicle. Why doesn't the county send me a letter to see if I object to neighbors using THEIR recreational vehicles (snowmobiles, ATV, etc.) running them up and down behind my house at 2AM when the bars let out?

You are getting very confused. I'm not the one that is panicking over changes. I've already said several times that I'm am not worried about the changes.

I've not said anything to the contrary. I've repeatedly said that society (i.e. the people) find it necessary to have rules to insure the health of the society.

It's already been pointed out to you that our founding fathers included the

How has code kept you and Robesin out of amateur radio and off the air?
It's not an effective filter.

Not hardly. I was discussing the fact that OTHER people consider it a filter. I have never, ever made any statement to that effect. I was discussing OTHER'S opinions and fears for the enlightenment of the ham from another country who asked why it was such a big deal here.

Just because I chose to discuss the opinions presented by some does NOT mean
I subscribe to those opinions.

can fire a gun , or whatever in my front yard and no nosy neighbor is going to call the police. Also I don't need to ask permission or get a zoning variance to erect an antenna . I lived in town for 12 years . Never again . Ace - WH2T

I read over you text much too quickly and was quick to take a much different spin on it that the one I see now.

Yes. The supreme courts whole reason for existence is to enforce the constitution to the letter, you are, again, correct, strange no one is seems more upset by the gross inability of it to have done so in recent decades ...

The crux is this, I see citizens playing much more into their self gov't. Let me give you an example of just how much so:
ALL police officers and sheriffs should be drafted, and go through a "boot camp." At the end of 12 weeks of boot, we press them into service for a four year term. The pay scale is fair and adjusted for special cases. But, we all accept this as our duty. With this one change we could just about completely remove corruption and restore respect to law enforcement. Plus, the added benefit would probably be an overall reduced cost to the tax payer.

But, this is only one change in a sea of changes I would make. Many I see are disenfranchised by gov't playing a mother/father role for them, this was never meant to be. I don't need a president, senator or rep "with a plan", I simply need them to be honest and upfront with the people, then represent the peoples wishes--this seems almost opposite from what I am experiencing. If I can trust 12 men with my life on a jury, then I can darn well trust 350 million governing ourselves beside me ...

Thanks Ace...

I guess one of my buttons got pushed...I just think it's such a shame that people in general (and I'm guilty of it too) just look the other way at "bad government" and let elected officials get away with the stuff they do. I mean, how many of us would get to break laws at work and not get fired? MAYBE government would get better if elected officials actually feared voters? 2 cents worth...

Begin, Mark, by undoing the damage you have already caused to No-Code Technicians.

There is hardly an "our number" in the equation. You are the lone crybaby in this group, Mark.

Your incessant hand-wringing and petulant whining about the CW requirement is getting old.

Go cry somewhere else. Your complaints are falling on deaf ears.

Yup - as long as those consumers know what they are getting into.

In more than a few places, the buyer doesn't know a house has covenants unless they ask exactly the right questions and insist on the answers in writing. Many folks live in houses with very restrictive covenants without ever realizing it, because they don't do anything that violates the covenants.

One of the ironies of all this is that covenanted properties tend to appreciate in value more slowly than unrestricted ones. This makes them less expensive - and more popular with buyers.

When I bought my present house, the real estate agent had no idea about any restrictions concerning this property. After a lot of digging they were uncovered.

Hopefully not literally!

The real kicker in all of this is the buyer who doesn't know the right questions to ask, and how to evaluate the answers. A verbal statement by the agent, owner or anybody else is worthless when confronted by legally recorded covenants in black-and-white.

These questions have to be asked up-front - preferably before even looking at a property.

Always remember that RE agents don't make any money until a sale closes.

Generally neighborhoods don't put them together. Homeowners associations and the related CCR's found in the deed are usually required by either city or county planning commissions as a tradeoff for denser than normal housing in planned communities. With those restrictions you usually get community open space and some level of community recreation facilities, etc.

Whether they are good or bad or something in-between really depends on what you want in your locality. Some of us enjoy the freedom to do more-or-less what ever we want with our house. Along with that right comes the responsibility to acccept whatever your next-door-neighbor does with his house. About 10 miles away is a community with out a HOA that is composed of 80 year old well maintained brick or wood colonial houses. One guy has painted his brick home contrasting colors of purple, pink and blue. Another puts fills up most of his yard with at least 100 beatup plastic santas and other xmas paraphernalia. And yet a third house has a very large oak that was chainsaw sculpted to look like a 30 foot nude with huge breasts and 2 large branches made into arms extended open toward the house. And these are neighborhoods with houses that sell for $900,000 and up.

I would prefer to not have stuff like that next door and am willing to trade off the right to paint my mailbox any color.

> Covenant communities should be outlawed.

Why should they be outlawed? If you don't like them just move to a location where there isn't a home owners association.

> Whatever > happened to a man's home being his castle (i.e. personal property rights)?

What specifically are personal property rights. I have yet to find the locality where you can do anything you want on your property.

Code by hand/ear is a quaint skill much loved by old geezers. Just like knowing how to use a slide-rule. Interesting for historical reasons... but not very useful otherwise. And old geezers kick the bucket... so in the end change comes by the minds of the young. Welcome to the 21st century, Marconi.

SC, I remember what happened to the net with the introduction of AOL "newbies". So I can relate to your fears. But I think that scenario will only play out if code AND written exams are abolished. I don't think your average CB'er could pass the technician exam without code.

Now, psychology... lazy people as a rule don't have frustration over their laziness. They only get frustrated by biological needs. Why? because they are L A Z Y.

Tenants do indeed suck. Take John Griffin for instance.

He's always late with the rent and when he does get it together on last day before eviction notices go out, he pays it lots of small dirty bills that have been God knows where.

Even though the lease stipulates NO PETS, John raises gerbils and collects toilet paper tubes. Have you ever smelled gerbil shit?

Then there are the overnight guests who never leave. John's trailer comfortably accomodates four. But between his mom's tricks and his loser friends, there's always at least ten folks there clogging up the septic system.

Parking is always an issue. In addition to John's shit brown '76 Pacer the above mentioned hangers-on park their assorted trucks, old cabs and pre 80's GM sedans with torn vinyl roofs in such a manner that the short bus that John rides to the special school district can't get through.

I heard a bunch of them also. After doing research on QRZ it appears they were all 20 WPM Extra Class hams. Passing a code test doesn't mean a damn thing. It's old, outdated, and useless. Code - old - who cares, time to more on and get the old dying farts out of this service.

and there of course you are plain wrong

Neither Morse code nor cw has been truly basic to Ham radio at any time in our history in making this statement you spout bogus propaganda

Morse Code has NOTHING whatever to do with radio it just so happens to exist and was apllied to first spark (which sure isn't CW) as it was applied to various wired aplication indeed the Morse Code test know even prove one can use Morse Code (as can be seen by skimming the threads bashing newbie code users on QRZ) indeed with you Dee we have a clear case of the dmage done the ARS by Code testing

we have an extra class our most tested therefore in theory our most knowledgable class of hma making down right stupid statement about what Ham radio is now it isn't entirely her fault of course she is product of th e system foisted on one by the FCC allowing the ARRL to decide what we needed to be real hams

it is rather like the case in B5 of Akara 7 where the leader fed propagnad about what made a real Akaran to leath weapons and turned them loose during an invasion the result was the they repelled the in vasion and killed off all of the inhabitants of Akara 7 as well

Dee Flint is a poster child for what went wrong with incentive licensing

in many cases we CAN indeed kill those that inpinge on our rights

Here in Michigan I can as can you Kill to defend yourself or your property the laws inhibiting were pared back effective around the first of OCT of this year in other case we may indeed argue some form of justifaction for even the act of homocide in defense of our right

3B7, ST. BRANDON (DXpedition Update/Press Release). Don Field, G3XTT, FSDXA Publicity Officer, sent out the following "FSDXA St. Brandon DXpedition Bulletin No.2" on December 6th:
"The Five Star DXers Association (FSDXA) expedition to St. Brandon (3B7) is still on course for September 2007. The plan is to be QRV from Friday 7th September to Monday 24th September, ensuring two full weeks and three weekends of activity. This Press Release is by way of an interim progress report, in response to a number of enquiries we have received.

The team is aware that a Polish expedition to Agalega has been announced for April 2007, but considers that demand for this rare one is such that an FSDXA-scale operation is fully justified. For example, our D68C operation netted in excess of 160,000 contacts, despite a Spanish operation the previous month which handed out almost 30,000 D6 contacts. Similarly, our 3B9C operation netted over 150,000 contacts, despite Robert 3B9FR, a resident of Rodrigues, being reasonably QRV over several years. 3B6/7 is much higher in the Wanted Lists than either of these entities.
An advance team of two will visit Mauritius early in the New Year to finalise many of the arrangements, and we will have more information following that visit. This visit was postponed from October due to illness, but all plans are now back on track and we are confident that we will be able to mount a successful large-scale (12 stations, 3 weekends, 100k+ QSOs) operation from St.Brandon in September 2007.
3B7C will have Joint Leaders by way of Neville Cheadle, G3NUG, and Don Beattie, G3BJ. We have received a number of enquiries about joining the expedition. As detailed in our previous announcement, we do have a full team in place. However, we will maintain a file of those who have expressed interest in case vacancies occur.
An early note about QSL arrangements. Neville G3NUG will be the lead QSL manager and will coordinate the QSL manager team using the very successful StarLog programme. Send direct QSLs to: Neville Cheadle G3NUG, Lower Withers Barns, Middleton on the Hill, LEOMINSTER, Herefordshire, United Kingdom HR6 0HY. Bureau cards to the RSGB bureau marked "G3NUG". There will be a facility for email requests via the website.
Last but by no means least, we welcome Martin Lynch and Sons and Nevada Communications, both major UK dealers, as sponsors. We also welcome Northern Illinois DX Association as our first cub sponsor.
As a reminder, our website will be accessible via both www.3b7c.com and www.fsdxa.com <http://www.fsdxa.com/3b9c>/3b7c where information will be posted as it becomes available."

SPECIAL CANADIAN PREFIX TO CELEBRATE "HELLO"....100 YEARS OF VOICE OVER RADIO WORLDWIDE". From: "Radio Amateurs of Canada HQ" <rachq@rac.ca>:
At the request of Radio Amateurs of Canada, Industry Canada has authorized all Canadian radio amateurs to use special event prefixes for the months of December 2006 and January 2007, to mark the 100th anniversary of the first AM voice broadcast by Reginald Fessenden on Decemebr 24, 1906. Reginald Fessenden, who was born in East Bolton, Quebec, on October 6, 1866, and lived until July 22, 1932, was the holder of more than 500 patents on a wide variety of subjects, and the inventor of radio as we know it today. He is particularly known for: the first voice transmission by radio in 1900, the first transatlantic two-way radio communications in January 1906, and the first radio broadcasts of entertainment and music in December 1906. On Christmas Eve, 1906, from a transmitting station in Brant Rock, Massachussetts, he sent a short program which included the song "O Holy Night" played on the violin and a reading from the Bible. A second short program was broadcast on December 31, 1906. Canadian radio amateurs are authorized to use the following special event prefixes during the period of December 1st (2006) to January 31st (2007) inclusive:
CF for VA stations CI0 for VY0 stations
CG for VE stations CI1 for VY1 stations
CH for VO stations CI2 for VY2 stations

All this, of course, to mark the 100th anniversary of Reginald Fessenden's first AM voice and music broadcast on December 24, 1906. And no, Pierre won't play Xmas carols on the piano on 3725 khz AM..."

Constitution) there are 2 distinct groups ie "The People" and "Congress" . I paraphrase - Congess shall make no law regarding the peoples right to Talking to yourself is a sign of impending mental collapse, Slow Code.

I almost missed your post because it was killed for excessive crossposting. I only saw it because Secwet Woger quoted it when my filters were not engaged.

By the way, hams are so poorly regarded by the unwashed masses that the Admin of that sleazoid den known as NIM Busters has kicked all hams off his main board. That's probably why Secwet Woger is back again.

Woger knows CW, but the Admin ain't impressed.

Tough to do, today. In a number of states, Illinois being one, new developments are required to have HOA's with a standard, boilerplate CC&R statement provided by the Assembly for simplicity.

Pre-existing non HOA communities are forming HOA's to protect themselves from intrusion by commercial interests that cannot get traction in other HOA communities.

AND...in at least two counties, here, there are basic CC&R's in place on undeveloped land, levied by county boards, in speculation that developers may wish to move that way. Meaning, you can buy a piece of land in deep weeds, build a home with your own hands, and before you close the door, be in violation of antenna restrictions. Even though the nearest neighbor may be an hour away.

Rejecting HOA communities, today, may mean having to move a half a continent away.

You can't even homestead property on the tundra, anymore.

That's a good question. I don't believe it was in place when I bought my house eleven years ago. But I've been hearing it now for a number of years from sources within both the real estate community, and media.

This is total crap! There is no "radio" involved. All you have to do is be dumb enough to pay a $32.00 a year "subscription fee" to talk to people on the internet, and pretend it's "Ham Radio." There IS a sucker

If the CC&R is "provided by the Assembly" is that to be understood as an agency of government?

The Assembly is an agency of government, yes. The boilerplate CC&R's provided, as I've read them, are provided as a guideline. Local HOA's are free to amend them as necessary, or as desired. Or to create CC&R's of their own.

There are in a number of states, now--Maryland and Delaware among them--agencies of government which, at least in theory, oversee the operations of HOA's within the state, and are the authority to which residents may appeal cases of malfeasance, or abuse. In Maryland, this agency has relatively broad powers, and works quite effectively at bringing errant HOA's into compliance. In other states...not so.

In many states, HOA's, and their oversight agencies, are not aware of the federal exemption protecting TV and small dish antennae, Ham and CB antennae, and--at least in the opinion of a couple of FCC Commissioners--shortwave receiving antennae. It's up to the homeowner to keep current of the regs, rulings and opinions of FCC regarding antennae for radio hobbycraft. These may be the homeowner's only weapons when the issue becomes heated on the front lawn.

There is a growing number of books out there, today, regarding the gathering nightmare of HOA abuse, offering accurate information state by state, and remedies in the event of abuse. Do a websearch. There's a LOT of information out there.

Your response goes right to the point. If the HOA is from a government entity the PRB-1 exemption should be claimed and defended prior to purchase.

Absolutely. But how many really know about that exemption going in? And frankly, how many really think about this issue when the realtor is throwing around numbers?

You would. I would. There are others here who would.

But by and large, no. Home buyers, as a group do not consider this issue when making the purchase. Preferring to bitch after the fact.

Then, again, most HOA's that I've gotten to deal with have been absolutely unwilling to both answer questions or provide copies of bylaws and regulations to which they hold homeowners responsible. One former member, here--who worked at VOA for years, is an active ham and SWL--lived under the shadow of an HOA which refused to provide him a copy of the bylaws, even after a ruling in his favor by the Maryland HOA oversight agency.

You're right. Exemptions and unlawful restrictions SHOULD be claimed and defended prior to purchase.

It doesn't happen.

If that was the test you took it explains a lot.... It sure explains why you are so fearful of the CBers taking over. You never passed a valid exam, so you might want to turn in that ticket and try again.
Let me know where you are and we will find you a testing session close.

We still don't have your call there SC. I'm thinking that you may not actually have a call and are just jealous of us folks that passed the

Oh, come on. Mr. Schleck will soon try to establish a new, moderated news group, and we should all welcome the experiment. It will either succeed or it will fail, but it is unlikely to impact the operation of these groups. You have nothing to fear. These groups have been taken over by the morons, and the morons have a history of never going away.

Unfortunately, that describes the entire Usenet, which long ago passed its prime. Web sites are the new order of things these days, and no introduction of moderated groups to Usenet will change that fact. If you want intelligent, relevant, and moron-free conversations, you have to go to a web site, because they have the control needed to keep out the jerks.

Ask Mark, who got banned by QRZ.COM for doing exactly what he does in these news groups every day.

Skilled at what? I am skilled at PSK31, MFSK, SSTV, DigitalTV, Packet, APRS, RTTY, Throb, Olivia, Domino, and even CW. So if an operator is skilled in most modes, then they are a skilled operator. You don't have to be skilled in all modes to be a skilled operator.

Actually, I couldn't care less if he could prove it. My question would be if he was a 13 WPM General, why in the hell isn't he an Advanced or an Extra Lite?

Saddest day in ham radio. Unfortunately, there's been a succession of them, starting with Incentive Licensing, Codeless Techs, General and Extra Lites, and now this.

Ham Radio just has not been the same since they eliminated spark.

Why am I not an Advanced or Extra? I'm happy where I am and don't feel like studying to get the Extra. Everything I want to do I can do with the General.

I know so many people who where kept out of Amateur Radio because they say no value and had no interest in the code. This change is the greatest day in Amateur Radio.

You can tell the hams who have not listened to CB in quite a while. It's about dead compared to what it was in the 70s. Hardly any truckers using it either. So the constant reference to CBers really shows ignorance.

Dropping the CW requirement is about 15 years too late. It will help, but young people have too many other interests now like computers and the Internet to get interested now and they still have beliefs that this is an old-fart hobby with morse code. Hard to change that perception, especially when you have so many old-farts trying to keep people out of the service.

Actually, the only change I really see is that now CW will be seen for what it actually is, a talent some excel at. In todays world it has little importance in radio and/or electronics and communication. And, in past decades has served no real purpose, other than limiting the numbers of members in the group. This protectionism has severed those who wished to make amateur radio a limited group of them and their friends, however, amateur radio has suffered greatly and lost much in new minds with new ideas who would serve to keep the hobby up-to-date and relevant in this millennium ...

Sometime in the future, I suspect, some who have drifted into the world of psychotic behavior will see how silly they have been, and will become ashamed over their past behavior.

JS

Living in the central valley in calif and near a few major freeways, channel 17 is quite busy all day, and their is much activity even late into the night.

It would be nice if amateur radio experienced the boon which cb did experience in the 70's. However, I fear the importance of radio beside the internet will prevent this from happening.

I think it is reasonable to say that ham radio was already destroyed because it has not kept up with change. Eliminating the CW tests will helbring it back from possible extinction.

Who cares it we get lazy people into the hobby? At least we get some people.

But that's the whole idea ... to stymie uncensored communications between rational adults.

That's why with every FCC ruling, the joys of scanning are effectively reduced in favor of it.

I agree. This is not 1950. People, including some who are anything but lazy, don't necessarily have amateur radio as their only thing to do. Way back in the dim dark past, people only had _money_ for maybe 1 hobby and had TONS of time becuase they only had money to do 1 or 2 things recreationally. People didn't routinely fly in jet airplanes (that was the really rich "Jet Set"), and the interstate higway system wasn't built yet so a traveling vacation was a real adventure that many less people tried.

I was a kid in the 50s. THERE JUST WASN'T THAT MUCH TO DO!!! So, sitting around learning the code, reading ham radio magazines and other magazines, and doing the sort of study-intensive things that used to be ham radio wasn't a big deal..

But my friend, who is ALWAYS busy with something now, doesn't care to allocate a big slice of time to learn the code. Not even 5 wpm. There's just so much stuff to work on around his house, kids to take care of, hunting and fishing to do, and he climbs mountains for fun. He's stuck at tech class, just because the code is just not worth it to him.

But he's an EE, so with this latest move, he's likely to be an Extra by the end of next year. He can learn everything that he needs to know that's outside what he already knows about electricity and radio in a few weeks. This is awesome for me, 'cuz he's about 25 miles away with a big ridge in between us, so VHF / UHF just does not work. Sure, I can get on a repeater and talk to him, if I want to tie up a repeater, but now... NVIZ antenna on 160 will likely see us communicating much easier. We've both got land for 160 meter antenna - I'll have to shorten mine a bit, but not much.

This is great.

Well of course it hasn't. What nonsense.

Eliminating spark, however, was a technical necessity as the state of the radio art advanced. It did not in any way compromise the process of licensing amateurs, nor did it practically affect the priveleges of licensees. All of the things I mentioned did, however, have a negative impact on the service.

Jules? I never knew he had a first name. I took the General, Advanced and Extra (as well as the "First Fone") at Washington Street under his watchful eye in the 1969-1971 period.

Saw the FCC press release, merging the Tech and Tech+ licenses. I just want to make sure that when the FCC says:

"With today's elimination of the Morse code exam requirements, the FCC concluded that the disparity between the operating privileges of Technician Class licensees and Technician Plus Class licensees should not be retained. Therefore, the FCC, in today's action, afforded Technician and Technician Plus licensees identical operating privileges."

This means that Techs now have Tech+ privileges, not vice versa right?

4021. End of an era: FCC announces end to CW testing

>From the ARRL website:

End of an Era: FCC to Drop Morse Testing for All Amateur License Classes
NEWINGTON, CT, Dec 15, 2006 -- In an historic move, the FCC has acted to drop the Morse code requirement for all Amateur Radio license classes. The Commission today adopted, but hasn't yet released, the long-awaited Report and Order (R&O) in WT Docket 05-235, the "Morse code" proceeding. Also today, the FCC adopted an Order on Reconsideration in WT Docket 04-140 -- the "omnibus" proceeding -- modifying the Amateur Radio rules in response to an ARRL request to accommodate automatically controlled narrowband digital stations on 80 meters in the wake of rule changes that became effective today at 12:01 AM Eastern Time. The Commission said it will designate the 3585 to 3600 kHz frequency segment for such operations, although the segment will remain available for CW, RTTY and data as it has been. In a break from what's been the usual practice in Amateur Radio proceedings, the FCC only issued a public notice at or about the close of business today and not the actual Report & Order, so some details -- including the effective dates of the two orders -- remain uncertain. Currently, Amateur Radio applicants for General and higher class licenses have to pass a 5 WPM Morse code test to operate on HF. Today's R&O will eliminate that requirement all around.

"This change eliminates an unnecessary regulatory burden that may discourage current Amateur Radio operators from advancing their skills and participating more fully in the benefits of Amateur Radio," the FCC said. The ARRL had asked the FCC to retain the 5 WPM for Amateur Extra class applicants only. The FCC proposed earlier to drop the requirement across the board, however, and it held to that decision in today's R&O.

Perhaps more important, the FCC's action in WT Docket 05-235 appears to put all Technician licensees on an equal footing: Once the R&O goes into effect, holders of Technician class licenses will have equivalent HF privileges, whether or not they've passed the 5 WPM Element 1 Morse examination. The FCC said the R&O in the Morse code docket would eliminate a disparity in the operating privileges for the Technician and Technician Plus class licensees -- something the ARRL also has asked the Commission to correct following the release of its July 2005 Notice of Proposed Rule Making (NPRM) in WT Docket 05-235.

"With today's elimination of the Morse code exam requirements, the FCC concluded that the disparity between the operating privileges of Technician class licensees and Technician Plus class licensees should not be retained," the FCC said in its public notice. "Therefore, the FCC, in today's action, afforded Technician and Technician Plus licensees identical operating privileges."

Technician licensees without Element 1 credit (ie, Tech Plus licensees) currently have operating privileges on all amateur frequencies above 30 MHz. Tech Pluses or Technicians with Element 1 credit have limited HF privileges on 80, 40, 15 and 10 meters. Under the Part 97 rules the Commission proposed last year in its NPRM in WT Docket 05-235, current Technicians lacking Morse credit after the new rules went into effect would have had to upgrade to General to earn any HF privileges.

The wholesale elimination of a Morse code requirement for all license classes ends a longstanding national and international regulatory tradition in the requirements to gain access to Amateur Radio frequencies below 30 MHz. The first no-code license in the US was the Technician ticket, instituted in 1991. The question of whether or not to drop the Morse requirement altogether has been the subject of often-heated debate over the past several years, but the handwriting has been on the wall -- especially since the FCC instituted an across-the-board 5 WPM Morse requirement effective April 15, 2000, in the most-recent major Amateur Radio licensing restructuring (WT Docket 98-143).

The FCC said today's R&O in WT Docket 05-235 comports with revisions to the international Radio Regulations resulting from the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) World Radiocommunication Conference 2003 (WRC-03). At that gathering, delegates agreed to authorize each country to determine whether or not to require that applicants demonstrate Morse code proficiency in order to qualify for an Amateur Radio license with privileges on frequencies below 30 MHz.

The list of countries dropping the Morse requirement has been growing steadily since WRC-03. A number of countries, including Canada, the UK and several European nations, now no longer require applicants for an Amateur Radio license to pass a Morse code test to gain HF operating privileges. Following WRC-03, the FCC received several petitions for rule making asking it to eliminate the Morse requirement in the US.

Typically, the effective date of an FCC Order is 30 days after it appears in the Federal Register. If that's the case, the Morse requirement and the revised 80-meter segment for automatically controlled digital stations would likely not go into effect until late January or early February 2007. That's not clear from the public notice, however. The FCC can order its decision effective upon release.

The ARRL will provide any additional information on these important Part 97 rule revisions as it becomes available.

I've had a noise on various frequencies on 2-meter FM for quite a while, which I believe it coming from my computer switching power supply.
Instead of trying to repair it, what specifications should I look for in a replacement power supply for my old IBM 6578-RBU NETVISTA computer in an effort to cure the noise problem?

Not yet ,
Typically, the effective date of an FCC Order is 30 days after it appears in the Federal Register.
If that's the case, the new rules would likely not go into effect until late January or early February 2007. That's not clear from the public notice, however. The FCC can order its decision effective upon release.

The ARRL will provide any additional information on these important Part 97 rule revisions as it becomes available.

4O3T QSLS. Bob, N6OX, with the 4O3T DXpedition, informs OPDX readers: "I wanted to apologize for some of the recent confusion with the 4O3T QSL cards. First of all many people are wondering how the cards ended up getting back to the states?? As part of the team I agreed to process the cards for NA/SA and collected the cards from YT6A on a recent trip back to Europe. As you can imagine this was a good size box and was heavy, which Air France quickly charged extra for. Due to the large volume of cards I had to process, we volunteered John, N7CQQ, to help us. This explains why the cards are now being mailed from Las Vegas. Our first group of QSL cards were printed just fine and mailed out. So we continued processing the cards and then discovered that the program had dropped the day off. We were able to identify some of the people that rec'd these cards and quickly resent revised QSL cards out explaining the problem, but unfortunately we could not identify everyone, so then the confusion set in. The printing glitch has been corrected, and we are back on track mailing out the QSL cards. For anyone that has one of these 'unique' cards, we will replace it with a properly dated card just contact either John at n7cqq@msn.com or me at n6ox@yahoo.com. Thanks for your understanding. Best Wishes for a Happy Holiday Season.... 73 Bob N6OX"

Joe, VA6JWT, who operated as 6O0JT last year, has been away from Canada for sometime. He indicates that upon his return he will continue to process cards. Joe will do direct cards first, then bureau cards but all cards will be responded to.

Graham, M5AAV, informs OPDX that effective immediately, he is now the QSL Manager for Steve, 9M6DXX. QSL direct or by the Bureau.

QSL VIA DL5EBE. Even though QSL Manager Dominik, DL5EBE, is now living in Russia, he states that direct QSL cards for any of the stations he is the manager for can still be requested from the following address: Dominik Weiel, Wintershall Holding AG, Abt. EV, Friedrich-Ebert-Str. 160, D-34119 Kassel, Germany. QSLs sent via the DARC QSL Bureau will be forwarded to Dominik.

ST2A QSL STATUS. Boris, T93Y, reports, "I am pleased to inform you that ST2A QSL cards are received from the printer and that all direct QSL requests received as of Saturday, 9th December are in the mail. You can see the card design in "QSL Info" and check status of your request in the "LOG Search" section of the ST2A Web page at: http://www.t93y.com/st2a As BHP (Bosnia and Herzegovina Post) can take up to two weeks to deliver a air mail letter (maybe even longer in these pre-holiday days) please give them some time before you start asking questions. Once again I would like to remind the DX community that 1 USD is not enough to send a letter anywhere in the world, while 1 IRC is fine. Full details are available in "QSL Info": section of the ST2A WEB Page...."

Nilay, TA3YJ, reports: "On December 11, 2006, I received the QSL cards for TA3J, TA3J/0 (AS099), TA3J/0 (AS115), TA3J/3, TA3J/4LH, TA3J/60, TA3YJ, TA3YJ/4 LH, TC2K4J, YM125ATA, YM3ATA, YM3BU, YM3LZ (WAE2000SSB), YM3LZ (WPX2000SSB), YM3SV and YM75TA callsigns that had been sent from Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada (VE3), Denmark, Estonia, United Kingdom, Finland, France,Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, USA (W1, W2, W3, K4, W8, W9, KL), Lithuania, Luxemburg, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Romania, South Korea, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Turkey and Ukraine QSL bureaus via TRAC QSL Bureau. I send my QSL cards myself directly to the QSL bureaus with regular intervals.... Thanks for your QSL cards. HNY, 73&88"

YX0A/YX0LIX QSL STATUS. Steve, KU9C, reports, "The YX0A/YX0LIX cards have arrived, and I'm in the process of preparing the first mailings. The process will be a bit slower than I'd like, due to the holidays and a few business and family commitments. Please do not resubmit; I'll use the DX bulletins to advise when I've finished mailing what I've got and status updates along the way. I do apologize for the delay in getting the cards out."

SPECIAL EVENT. The Straight Key Century Club (SKCC) invites you to celebrate their first anniversary with special event station K1Y. Stations will be operating in all call areas on all HF bands from January 1-31st. All special event operators will be using straight keys and bugs. Operators are free to use any part of the bands but will probably concentrate around the SKCC frequencies (listed on the SKCC Web page). Special event QSL cards are available for working stations in each call area. Certificates will be awarded for contacts with all call areas. Questions can be sent to K4VD at: kevin@k4vd.net
The SKCC Web is available at: http://skccgroup.com

They will be operated by two lectures from the Politechinic College."

VU7, LAKSHADWEEP ISLANDS (VU2LD News).The following press release is from the VU7LD Web site date December 14th (edited): "On 13th December a presentation was made at the Lakshadweep Secretariat conference center. Over 26 staff members from the island administration attended the present-ation. The presentation showcased HAM radio and its many facets and included a live demonstration of HAM station operations with voice and CW. The attendees also visited one of the operational stations from the DXpedition to get a first hand experience of what we are doing on the island. In addition the use of HAM Radio in an emergency scenario was highlighted and this was appreciated by the attendees.
The island administration is in discussion with ARSI as to how training for their staff could be administered and ARSI has offered to organize training and coordinate with the examiners to conduct HAM license tests on the island itself. We could soon see a club station on LD!....
Stay tuned 73, de Gopal VU2GMN"

4057. How to get Amateur Radio Licenses

Subject: Amateur Radio Licenses
Washington D.C.-

It was announced today that Kellogg's and the Federal Communications Commission have signed a pact to issue Amateur Radio Licenses on specially marked boxes of Corn Flakes.

In this unprecedented move the FCC believes this will not hurt amateur radio but allow all individuals to receive an amateur radio license without having to demonstrate any skills with the exception of being able to use a pair of scissors to cut out their operating permit from the breakfast cereal box.

Kellogg's spokesperson commented that they were proud to have been selected by the government to be the issuer of licenses for amateur radio in the US and hope to soon make an agreement with other cereal loving countries. They also expect that will be issuing certificates of achievement for DXCF for confirmed contacts with 100 corn flakers.

Whew!

Finally, the code requirement is going away.

Now we can start working towards only one license class. One that doesn't separate those who know more and those who know less. After all, look how it hurts the self esteem of those technician class licensees.

And then, when we have only one license class that permits all privileges, then we can work towards removing the written testing requirement, given the state of store bought equipment these days.

And then, finally, getting a ham license will be merely filling out a form, writing a check, and then mailing it in.

And then, finally, the true end state, no license requirement at all.

Breaker breaker 14.230, there, good buddy! You got yer ears on?

How long are we going to have to read all these posts from the cry-babies waaa-waaaing over getting rid of that out-dated and out-moded code test.
Fer cripes sakes, get on with it and use this modernization of the service to attract more people into ham radio.

Isn't that what was being discussed all along; and, isn't that what an amateur license is really worth?

It is only the person who gives the license credibility, give a license to an idiot, he just becomes an idiot with a ticket, or an appliance operator, a idiot who sends CW and has a license, etc.

I just came across an ad for these generators:

1kW, $163

Seems too cheap. I'm a big believer of "you get what you pay for" -- generally. Has anyone any experience with these? Thought? Comments?

Hail Eris!
Demon Prince of Absurdity

"And no, I did not have sex with my son. But if I did I certainly wouldn't tell you. Something so beautiful and precious should be kept private." -- Kathy L. Mosesian, or possibly not really her, confesses she may be a liar and committer of incest with her own son, in MID:

The reporter asked Colin Powell (or George Bush), "What proof do you have that Iraq has weapons of mass destruction?"
He replied, "We kept the receipts." -- Bill Hicks

"They thought I was fair game. I was an instrument of purpose to achieve their desires and not 100 percent real and ALSO that they had me by the short curlies because I thought that the world revolved around them and therefore I think that I am fair game and rightly so. If they want to play dirty, I get to too. It's not a one-way street. I will use the physcial strength that I have over them, my superior 5'7-3/4" height advantage, the boxing moves I paid to learn, the suprise of pussyfooting up to them with their back to me in a public place 18 1/2 years after the fact and thus not only do will they not know that I am but a pica's distance away from them, but that I even exist on earth." -- Chris Tsao

Looney Maroon nominee for August 2006 Johnny D Wentzky foamed:
"You never asked someone who goes into areas of the internet that are only for adults who has an underage id somehow or another if they are a cop posing as an underage person online?
I guess lots of people just don't watch dateline or read stories much.
Why don;t you go to pervertedjustice,com and see what they do. They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they lied to membners of the public.

They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they posed as an underage person and agreed to do all sorts of sex acts wioth adult males, and they are adults posing as teenager themselves. They make themsleves into liars by falsely impersonating underage persons and by not fuilfilling the words they tell the victims online in their chats. Why don't you read it where they tell these victims of their deceit about how they have been with grown men and such? Why don't you read it where they say, "That would be cool." after someone makes an advance towards an adult who is posing as a teenager? And, where they agree to meet the person, etc.
Lost control, didn't you?
Is that why you feel as if you need to lie so much now? I see where lots of these false impersonation games are not sticking. They feel as if they can lie and then order the victims to get counseling in the gayblade, governmental, pro-choice tax leech counseling centers. They are doing nothing more than usury and fraud in many cases." -- Wentzky almost comes out of the closet as a pedo/ephebophile in MID: <H%%Eg.28916$Uq1.22411@bignews6.bellsouth.net>

We'll have to wait and see the actual text of the Report and Order but I do believe that is exactly what is intended. Techs will have to wait until 30 days after the R&O is published in the Federal Register to use those privileges.

Think about it. If you were a tech plus, and you passed your cw test, and you were operating every day practicing cw on 40 meters, do you think the FCC is going to tell you that you are now a tech and can't operate below 10 meters?

Hummm.... come to think of it that is essentially what happened in the 60's isn't it, with "incentive licensing."

But these days the tendency is for the FCC to give more priviledges, not take them away once they were earned.

As the Christmas season draws closer, many of us who have watched the war in Iraq have wondered how we could help or "make a difference" to the lives of some of our Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Marines who have been wounded in combat.

Although there are several military hospitals that take in the wounded, most find their way into Walter Reed Army Hospital.

Please take a minute to fill out a Christmas card and address it as follows:

A Recovering American Service Member
c/o Walter Reed Army Medical Center
6900 Georgia Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20307-5001

Perhaps a personal note of thanks and gratitude for the sacrifice they've made would be appropriate.

So much for YOUR claim that you don't go off-topic on "legitimate"

And considering you keep insisting you're a "legitimate" Veteran, I would have thought that the topic of this ONE thread would have been immune to your babblings.

As the Christmas season draws closer, many of us who have watched
the war in Iraq have wondered how we could help or "make a difference"
to the lives of some of our Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Marines who have been wounded in combat.

Although there are several military hospitals that take in the
wounded, most find their way into Walter Reed Army Hospital.

Sad that you are too fucking stupid to know otherwise. I don't have anything against anyone's religion. I asked a question. As far as I can tell the word does not exist in your context.

What difference does it make?

Everyone is getting their license per the regulations that qualify one for a license at the time. Don't hate your fellow hams. This goes against what ham radio stands for.

If you have a beef, it is with the FCC.

Bill, I respectfully disagree. Your strategy works with normal people.
Robesin isn't normal, and he'll only go away when his ISP is shut off.
He's the originator of the infamous "MARS >>>IS<<< Amareur Radio" declaration and the excrement eating thread. At the moment, he's got himself wrapped up in the flag, so he's untouchable even if off-topic.

Bill...Welcome to the "logic" of Brian P Burke, N0IMD, hiding behind one of his "anonymous" screen names as "hot--ham-and-cheese"

Brian has participated, along with Leonard H Anderson (unlicensed) and Mark Morgan (KB9RQZ) in an anti-Amateur Radio tirades and has fallen flat on his face in one prognostication about Amateur Radio after another. He doesn't like it that I've been right.

One of Brain's favorite tactics is to take comments out-of-context and then try to represent them as the entire "gist" of the comments.

My "MARS >>>IS<<< AMATEUR RADIO" comment refered to the fact that the MARS program was staffed almost entirely by Amateur Radio licensees
and was in the very spirit of what it means to be an Amateur Radio licensee...He doesn't want to repeat THAT part since it wouldn't serve his purposes. (to try and embarrass me)

He also claims that I am repsonsible for the "excrement eating"
thread. That's a blatant lie. His "friend", Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ, is SOLELY RESPONSIBLE for the authorship of those subject lines and use of profanity. You won't see my subject lines repeating it..

Brain, of course, has NEVER owned up to any one of his own misrepresentatiuons of Amateur Radio. He has made ludicrous claims that have failed to meet any statndard of proof or substance, including any one of several claims of having been a DX station,
misrepresentations about MARS, RACES, ARES, and other poorly conceptualized opinions that have fallen by the wayside as failing the test of evidence.

Everyone's entitled to their opinions. Brain's opinions of me are obviously low as he, despite having allegedly been a veteran himself, are anti-veteran and anti-volunteer. I've rubbed his nose in one failed opinion after another.

So...There's my $0.02. Do with it as you will, but I'd take a BIG grain of salt with any traffic coming from "hot-ham-and-cheese", as you are welcome to do with mine.

HAM isn't as popular as it used to be. All of the old HAMS have either died off or are no longer on the air for various reasons. When a service is threatened due to lack of interest, something must be done to encourage people into the hobby. The FCC decided to eliminate one of the hardest parts of obtaining a ticket in an effort to encourage people to obtain a license and hopefully keep HAM radio alive and well. Why is it I do not hear much code on the bands anymore? It used to be that every ship at sea would communicate via key. Not today. Not in the age of Satellites. So, why would you feel the code should still remain an active part of being a HAM? Do YOU still use code? If so, for what?

Yeah, keep HAM back into the old days and don't evolve with technology. That's the way to do it. It was better in the old days when you had to bust your ass to learn a code that you would probably never use or even listen to.

Time to move forward. With the cost of equipment far more expensive than what CB used to be in the 70's, I seriously doubt HAM will turn into what CB has become. Also, you fail to mention the fact that the FCC DOES monitor and enforce HAM radio unlike CB that's become a zoo.

Anyone can go to the FCC enforcement website and read the many reports of hefty fines imposed on commercial radio and HAM alike.

And before HAM turns into a CB zoo, it would have evolved a lot further than it is today and people still wouldn't be able to buy a HAM toy to use like CB. Enforcement will become a HAM wide effort, whereas, established HAMs will have to keep an eye on new operators to ensure they don't cross the line and if they do, turn them in to the FCC for action. Most HAMS I know can work together to locate the fixed transmission of another HAM.

So, relax. You will probably be gone to the big HAM shack in the sky before HAM goes the way of CB.

Bill, this is the first Robesin reply in years where he did not forge the attributes to read "snot-scam-and sleaze..." Robesin is trying to win you over by playing nice this time. Unfortunately, the rest of us know his game.

Robesin is right? When???

Robesin attacks when I reposted an article taken directly from the ARRL web site quoting an ARRL Vice President >in its entirety< stating that amateurs have an overblown sense of self-importance.

> One of Brain's favorite tactics is to take comments out-of-context
> and then try to represent them as the entire "gist" of the comments.

One of Robesin's favorite tactics is to make homosexual inuendo or claims of pedophilia when he encounters someone who disagrees with him.

> My "MARS >>>IS<<< AMATEUR RADIO" comment refered to the fact that > the MARS program was staffed almost entirely by Amateur Radio licensees

> licensee...

I pointed out that MARS absolutely has non-amateur leadership, non-amateur participants, and an entirely non-amateur mission. Hell, Robesin claims to have been chopped to an NMC MARS slot on Okinawa - as an active duty, non-amateur participant. Yet he continues with his "Sorry Hans, MARS >>>IS<<< Amateur Radio" nonsense. Didn't even know what the MOD was. He tried pulling this stunt before he realized that I had MARS experience.

> He doesn't want to repeat THAT part since it wouldn't serve
> his purposes. (to try and embarrass me)

Except that I was an actual MARS affiliate and knew what I was talking about. You didn't. Still don't.

> He also claims that I am repsonsible for the "excrement eating"
> thread. That's a blatant lie. His "friend", Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ, is > SOLELY RESPONSIBLE for the authorship of those subject lines and use of > profanity. You won't see my subject lines repeating it..

Sorry Robesin, but you are the one who posted the "excrement eating" filth, and keep reposting your quote. Unbelievable, but Google provides.

> Brain, of course, has NEVER owned up to any one of his own
> misrepresentatiuons of Amateur Radio.

I have opinions but Robesin doesn't allow dissenting opinions. Opinions that differ from his are "LIES."

> He has made ludicrous claims > that have failed to meet any statndard of proof or substance, including > any one of several claims of having been a DX station,

David Heil/K8MN has me confirmed at least twice. Robesin knows this, therefore Robesin lies.

> misrepresentations about MARS, RACES, ARES, and other poorly
> conceptualized opinions that have fallen by the wayside as failing the > test of evidence.

After it was obvious from one regular on RRAP that his ARES group was unable to fully support an upcoming American Red Cross exercise, Robesin was asked to write a duty schedule for the exercise. The stated requirements were three 3 operators on duty per shift. He shorted the 1st eight hours of the exercise by all three personnel. He claims it was covered, but the supported agency was not supported at all. The subsequent shifts were shorted from one to two operators per shift. Robesin claims that ARES can support all agency needs even when they lack enough volunteers. Amateur Operators can perform Super-Human feats, OR the ARC is just an 8AM - 5PM agency.

> Everyone's entitled to their opinions.

Not true. Hot-ham is not entitled to an opinion, if Robesin has anything to say about it.

> Brain's opinions of me are > obviously low as he, despite having allegedly been a veteran himself, > are anti-veteran and anti-volunteer.

My opinions of Robesin are spot on.

In addition to slinging accusations of homosexual and pedophilia at those who disagree with him, I am now a veteran-hater and a volunteer-hater. Nevermind that I am a veteran and a volunteer.

Robesin has claimed that he can have me picked up on his say so as an LPN with a simple phone call from Tennessee. To another poster on RRAP, he claimed that "People who shoot off their mouths can have their tires slashed, rocks thrown through windows, and wives terrorized," but later clarified that all those bad things would be at someone else's hands.

A well known Amateur Radio store advertising in QST, whose ham daughter was featured in the ad photo, was said to be "selling something" but not amateur equipment.

Robesin, whose father was a Sailor Army Recruiter (I swear thats not a typo), lays claim to seven hostile actions in the USMC, but who's only overseas assignment was Okinawa.

There's more, much more, but if I went on and on and on you'd probably think I was making it up. I'm not. Google provides.

> I've rubbed his nose in one > failed opinion after another.

Yet it is your excrement on another man's genitals, according to your own original claims and subsequent quotes. Google provides, and you've requoted yourself numerous times.

> So...There's my $0.02. Do with it as you will, but I'd take a BIG

Your $0.02 isn't worth two cents. Google provides.

The pro-code/no-code debates remind me of the Am/SSB debates on the ham bands back in the 70's.

Not true, Brain...Not true. However you go right on ahead with your tale of woe.

> Robesin is trying to > win you over by playing nice this time. Unfortunately, the rest of us

Robeson DOES "play nice"...Unless you blatantly lie to me or get caught lying about something that you should know better than to lie about.

For example: Brian P Burke promising to keep certain information
"private" via e-mail, but then running right on back to the NG and divulging that which he promised to not divulge.

Hence the complete lack of respect for Brian P Burke.

Let's start off with YOUR assertions that ARES.RACES, etc couldn't / wouldn't respond to any major disaster in any meaningful numbrs or for a sustained period.

I said you were wrong.

You said several nasty things about "uniforms", "patriotic bunting", "ARRL sockpuppet", etc [words, by the way, straight out of the Leonard H Anderson playbook].

Then came a series of hurricaines and tornaos to the south and southwest. All of them supported at length by ARES and RACES (among others, of course)

Then came September 11th...Then came Hurricane Katrina...Then came Hurricaine Rita...Again, all agencies YOU claimed couldn't / wouldn't respond did exactly that.

And it wasn't true then, it's not true now.

The ARRL vice president's sentiments are NOT shared by the Department of Homeleand Security, the Department of Defense, Salvation Army, The American Red Cross, the Department of State and other agencies.

Only true when there is such evidence of that sort of behaviour, Brain.

So far it's hit the mark (pradon the pun) with Mark and Toiddie.
The jury's out on you, but you cleaned up your act.

Uhn huh.

And over 95% of Amateur Radio >>>IS<<< staffed by licensed Amateur

Yes, Brain, I know what the MOD is. You've allowed yourself to be hypontized by Lennie's incessant repeating of that claim.

It was wrong then. It's wrong now.

Brian P Burke uttering yet again more mistruthful statements in a public forum.

Sorry, brain, but one again YOU are lying.

The "excrement eating" posts belong to your "buddy", KB9RQZ. And the recent onslaught of re-tasked subject lines with exactly those words are HIS doings...Not mine.

Stop lying, Mr Burke.

I don't have Dave's logs.

Sigh.

I guess we can only watch Brain continue to make a fool out of himself.

Sure. Have an opinion.

But when you express it as "fact" and the "facts" don't bear up under the scrutiny of 3rd party reports to the contrary, don't get upset when you get "called" for your errors, Brain.

Brain.

You hated them before, Brain...I am sure I am only the focus of your disdain in THIS forum.

about ANY volunteer group save your Scouting troop.

Bigger sigh.

More of Brian P Burke's misquoting. I cited a news item some years ago where exactly that thing occcured.

Now for having mentioned it, Brain insists that I have made thinly veiled threats of a same nature.

An act of cowardice.

More deceit.

Brain...WHY do you lie so readily?

"Sailor Army Recruiter"...?!?!?

No Brain...let's get the FACTS right. My father served on Active Duty in the Untied States Navy during the Korean Conflict.

He was later an Active Duty recuriter for the US Army Reserve.
Yes, Brain, SOME people DO serve in more than one branch of the Armed Forces than one...

And no, Brain, Okinawa was NOT my "only overseas assignment".

Much of what you say is not "made up"...Just quoted out of context

But mostly quoted out of context.

Google provides evidence that any "opinions" uttered by you under any one of your "anonymous" names needs to be taken with a grin of salt
the size of the Rock of Gibralter.

As usual.....

Does Robesin always start off with a lie? Apparently so.

In any event, I changed his forgings back to the original content.

Do I have to start another tally of your lies such as I had to do a few years back? What was it? An average of 10 new lies a day for a week before I gave up?

No lies, Robesin. You just don't like my opinions.

There was no promise, and what you claim was a hostile action was nonsense.

Robesin has six other hostile actions. He says.

I don't use the phrase "sock puppet" or "ARRL sock puppet." I don't think I've ever used the phrase "patriotic bunting," either. I do use the word "uniforms" as in Robesin will do anything to get into a uniform since his USMC career was cut short by some unmentionable mystery.

Perhaps why Robesin claims that my statements are straight out of the Anderson playbook is because Robesin is unable to distinguish a Hot-Ham posting from an Anderson posting. His stupidity is not my problem, but he tries to make it so.

> Then came a series of hurricaines and tornaos to the south and

Do all amateurs have super-human abilities in Robesin-world?

ARES is a volunteer organization. It suffers from shortages of manpower and equipment just as do non-volunteer response organizations during an emergency.

> Then came September 11th...Then came Hurricane Katrina...Then came

Only Amateur Radio responded with exactly enough of everything?

Lots of agencies responded. Lots of News Reports about too little, too late. Lots of Government Officials claiming too little, too late. Lots of Citizen Victims claiming too little, too late. I don't know how Robesin missed it, unless he was busy with that 1,000 yard stare.

> We can then dig up your "unlicensed devices" rants, among others.

No rant. Unlicensed devices and cell phones handle most day to day emergencies.

There is no jury. There's only Robesin and he is subject to the laws of our nation.

Gee, you sure hate it when someone out-assholes you using your own sick tactics.

You originated the excrement eating posting, and you have since requoted yourself for the sake of clarity, however, what you said was far from clear. If you'd like to restate what it was that you said, hopefully in a clearer way...

No, nevermind. It was sick enough the first time it came around.

You post in absolutes..., for example, "Sorry Hans, MARS >>>IS<<< Amateur Radio."

I pointed out that the Chief of Air Force MARS, at the time, was not an amateur radio operator.

That single fact sunk your whole position on MARS as an amateur organization, unless you want to argue the definition of "is."

Nope. You bring disdain upon yourself in your behavio[u]r toward others.

> You've not had a single constructive, complimentary thing to say > about ANY volunteer group save your Scouting troop.

My comments were about people who are volunteers of multiple volunteer agencies, and when a crisis occurs, have to support one agency and not all. For example, you are a "professional" volunteer, committing to the Tennessee State Militia, the Civil Air Patrol, ARES, MARS, and who knows what else. And your professional position as an ER LPN should be a high priority in your community. So when the claxon goes off, which way do you run? Which volunteer organization(s) are left holding the bag because Robesin overcommitted himself and really isn't super-human?

Yeh. Big, big sigh. Maybe if you just quit posting such nonsense....

Here's a hint, next time you cite a news item, present it as a cited news item and not as a threat. It's called "clarity," and you lack it.

I perceived a threat. In Robesin's own words, one has only to perceive a threat for there to be a threat.

What scares me most isn't that you made a mistake in your grammar when posting that sick nonsense, it's that you posted the sick nonsense at all.

It is grossly off topic and has no place in an amateur radio discussion newsgroup.

I certainly hope that Paul Schleck agrees.

that only applies to Robeson not his victums

Icertinaly precieved a threat when in 1998 he finished a long about guns and marksmenship with "one shot one Kill even in illiopolis" where I lived at the time. and ofcourse my father picking up the phone and hearing someone say I am going to kil you mark" roudn the same was in way threatening and calls to local postal office and police station asking where I lived wasn't threatening

you were lucky steve that Illiopis was so poorly served by the Phone service that you calls could only be traced to AC

I have been studying the code for a while now and I know all the letters and everything but I am very slow with it yet. My goal has been to take the code test in January,I have already passed the tech and general tests.But I gotta tell you,all the crap from guys like you have really been a turn off. "Laziness,dumbing down,end of ham radio,all that other ignorant crap from a bunch of these people make me think why in the world learn the code,I sure would not want to make a contact with one of these guys.No way my sending would be good enough for these perfect hams and who needs the grief.But you have it all figured out and know what the future holds for this HOBBY.So I may go ahead and take the test next month and I might not.In the end it wont make any difference will it?I really wish you and those like you would accept the reality of the way things are and let it go, enjoy the hobby and stop spreading hate and discontent.You just drive people away with that junk.

Everyone has issues, but there's no need for Robesin to scour the internet and bring stuff back to RRAP that has no place on RRAP. But

Looney Maroon nominee for August 2006 Johnny D Wentzky foamed:
"You never asked someone who goes into areas of the internet that are only for adults who has an underage id somehow or another if they are a cop posing as an underage person online?
I guess lots of people just don't watch dateline or read stories much. Why don;t you go to pervertedjustice,com and see what they do. They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they lied to membners of the public.
They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they posed as an underage person and agreed to do all sorts of sex acts wioth adult males, and they are adults posing as teenager themselves. They make themsleves into liars by falsely impersonating underage persons and by not fuilfilling the words they tell the victims online in their chats. Why don't you read it where they tell these victims of their deceit about how they have been with grown men and such? Why don't you read it where they say, "That would be cool." after someone makes an advance towards an adult who is posing as a teenager? And, where they agree to meet the person, etc.
Lost control, didn't you?
Is that why you feel as if you need to lie so much now? I see where lots of these false impersonation games are not sticking. They feel as if they can lie and then order the victims to get counseling in the gayblade, governmental, pro-choice tax leech counseling centers. They are doing nothing more than usury and fraud in many cases." -- Wentzky almost comes out of the closet as a pedo/ephebophile in MID:

Anytime anything starts to go wrong for Robesin, he has to get to the wives...

He started in with Len's wife, then your wife, then my wife, then his gratis UP attorney's wife...

Now we know why Mark can't author a cohesive sentence. Mussa been all those

That still doesn't 'splain why he thinks of another man's sphincter as a

SOLAR CYCLE 24 (Good News for DXers!). Scientists are predicting that the next solar cycle (24) will be BIG. Solar Physicist David Hathaway of the Marshall Space Flight Center states solar cycle 24 is due to peak in 2010 or 2011, and "looks like its going to be one of the most intense cycles since record-keeping began almost 400 years ago." He also states that the geomagnetic storms may be so extreme, it could "cause power outages and make compass needles swing in the wrong direction." Their analysis shows the next Solar Maximum should peak around 2010 with a sunspot number of 160 plus or minus 25 making this the strongest solar cycle in the past fifty years possibly one of the strongest in recorded history. For the complete story, please visit the founding Web page at:
http://science.nasa.gov/headlines/y2006/21dec_cycle24.htm?list50675

VU7, LAKSHADWEEP ISLANDS (VU2LD News).....
* The following press release is from the VU7LD Web site dated December 22nd (edited): "VU7LD PRESS RELEASE - 11: Just a few days left for VU7LD to complete their work on Kavaratti Island in Lakshadweep. After VU2LX, VU3ELR, VU3SPQ and VU2GMN returned to the mainland yesterday, there are VU2NKS, VU3IZO, VU3RGP, VU3RSB, VU2PJP and VU2RCR left to work the remaining days, wind up and transport the equipment back to the mainland.
In spite of propagation not being at its best, several solar flares and multiple power outages, the team has managed almost 50K QSO's and we hope to up the number during the last few sessions, especially in digital modes. There was also a huge lightning strike on the island a few days ago that destroyed several television sets, refrigerators etc and the team is very fortunate that we were not affected and no damage to equipment took place.

The transfer of logs to the mainland for updating the webpage has been a problem but VU2ZAP and VU2SJD have been working very hard to sort out the many errors and partials that have been brought to our notice and updating the online logs. VU2ZAP has also been diligently answering all mail regarding errors and we expect that most of the issues will be sorted out completely. There will be more releases later.

* VU7LD PRESS RELEASE 12 (dated December 23rd): "We have found that several times when one of our operators, especially CW operators go QRT, some other station starts operating with the same call sign and gives reports. These are obviously pirates and so the QRG station thinks it has worked VU7LD when in fact it was a pirate. Obviously then the contact will not reflect on the on line logs. Please bear this in mind."
Stay tuned, de Gopal VU2GMN

* Currently, the online logs are available for the period between December 1st through part of December 14th, at the following URL address:
http://www.arsi.info/vu7/onlinelog.shtml
Next log update is expected on December 26th. Remember to QSL via W3HNK.
For more details and updates, the ARSI Web page is available at:
http://www.arsi.info/vu7/

VU7, LAKSHADWEEP ISLANDS (VU2RG News).....
* The following press release is from the VU7RG Web site and Frank/DL4KQ dated December 22nd (edited): "VU7RG permitted to operate on 30m Band!!!
Today special permit was granted by WPC (Indian Govt.) thanks to relentless efforts of the National Institute of Amateur Radio (NIAR), namely well known Mrs. Bharathi VU2RBI. Due to the current poor conditions 30m will have high priority for the VU7RG operations since it will be one of the few bands to serve the most difficult regions, especially North America.
First freights, including efficient 30m antennas, has already been shipped a few days ago. The first advance teams will enter the islands on January 9th to start with the setups so that the public can expect the start of operations on time.
More details can be found on www.vu7.in which should be visited from now on on regular base since there might be more breaking news possible within the next days! VU7RG will be a full-fledged operation of experienced Hams with good equipment taking care of your needs! We need your support!"
ADDED NOTE:"You now have a comparison from the area we are going to, and this gives us the opportunity to benefit from your monitored band-openings; hence providing us with your observations and valuable suggestions so that we can analyze and consider them for a well-planned operation of 15 stations! Get part of the team and use the VU7RG Blog Log to tell us your observations."

* SPECIAL NOTE: Dov, 4Z4DX/M0DOV, will be active from VU7RG on 160m, 80m and RTTY on 17m from January 18-25th. SKEDS ARE WELCOME BEFORE JANUARY

Todd won't be out and about for a couple of days. He's busy helping Santa during this Christmas season.
Todd did take time out for a joyous little dance, however. You can see him in his little green elf suit at the link below. I bet you didn't know that he was so light on his feet, did you?

Mark's fixation and relentless attacks aimed at Steve are borderline psychotic.

Mark has now entered the realm of fellow stalker, Roger Wiseman.

steve or lloyd or who ever you are calling your self today I do not attack Robeson except in self defense

nor do I enage in rentless attacks again that is the special of Robeson and Wisemen . I did not as steve did this week take Vaction time from work in order to hours making hunderneds of post to make hunreds perhaps thousands of flase charges

I also use steve as general dumping ground for the attacks I fee he inspires and I feel no qualms about using him this way after his years of abusing Me

what are you nuts ennough to think becuase I label your trash with steve name I realy beleive steve Robeson posted it?

that does make you a fool 'Not anybody" a fool as well the coawrd you clearly are the only conection to steve this thread has (that I know of) is steve inspries this sort of attacks as he did with ole woger and it serves to divert the antention of most of the NG form it 4223. microphone impedance matching circuit?

I've just bought a nominal 150 Ohm Z Shure dynamic mic & I want to use it with my FT-897, which expects a minimum 200 Ohm Z. Is there a good impedance matching circuit out there that I could build? Do I need to?

Thanks.

Name: Kirill
Call: VE3AXC

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year everyone! I will be a subscriber of this forum from now on, so nice meeting everybody!

On this note, please allow me to stray a bit off this forum's topic but my info might still be relevant for some. I myself have been a ham for 8 years; also run a small QSL card printing business (my printishop is located in Toronto, Canada) and have a web site specifically dedicated to that www.qslcanada.com

Reason I would like to post this message on this forum is to let your group know that I have a pretty good group referral discount program.

The idea is quite simple and there is no catch.... For each HAM who is referred by you and who wishes to place an minimum order of 500 cards, you would receive 100 (custom designed) cards of the same type free of charge. The offer is transferable, so if for example you let me know that you don't need any more cards, I will be happy to print additional 100 cards for your friend free of charge (or charge for 100 cards less)

This offer may be ideal for your group or a club you belong to. For example, if you refer say 3 HAMs who would like to print a minimum 500 cards for themselves, you would receive 300 cards as appreciation for spreading the word about qslcanada
; you could transfer it to someone as a gift ; or each of 3 Hams would only pay for 400 cards, since each one will get 100 cards free. To sum it up, each of the referral counts as 100 free cards in any shape or form. Pse let me know if you have any questions.

So if bunch of Hams in this group who are into QSLing might be interested to giving someone a free gift or getting a good deal on the next batch, pse let me know. The offer is valid any time in future. www.qslcanada.com has quite a bit of samples, more info and e-ham reviews

PS Have got to mention this, since it did happen before, where some folks took this posting too personally. I just wanted to get this info out there ONE TIME ONLY! Please don't call me any spammer names or hate mail me. I believe this to be a fair group offer any hams by hams enterprise deserves a little exposure to start out with.

I will try to participate in this group from now on, so best 73 to everyone! Happy New Year!

I'm sorry. What is "enage"? Which age? I know nothing about "star shit", but apparently you do. Do you prefer "star shit" from, say, Paris Hilton or Nicole Ritchie? Naaahhhh, not your style. My guess is that you'd prefer "star shit" from the likes of Elton John or Boy George.

And what, exactly, did this post have to do with you? As usual, you come bumbling in to leave an uncalled-for comment that is less than legible and barely understandable.

Step away from the Sheep, Mark.

Markie, (PROV) means "provisional" If you hadn't gotten kicked out

TEH WAY OF THE K00K
Never learn from your mistakes.
Always practice your mistakes; you may get them right.
Always pick on those smarter and tougher than you.
Always believe that only you know the TRVTH.
Never allow logic or reason get in the way of a good k00k.
When being overwhelmed by logic and reason: k00ksuit!
If you are going to be wrong, do it at the top of your lungs.
When caught in a lie: LIE!
When in doubt: Order the Crab Won Ton
Plagiarism is your friend. Use it.
Whenever contradicted; morph, start calling people names, and make false accusations. Include the children of your target in your allegations, even if they don't have any.
(06-Jun-05) When nobody else will listen, post to your own fan group.
(06-Jun-05) Obviously, since you have your own fan group, this must mean that you have fans. Post prolifically to your fan group - you wouldn't want to disappoint them!
(10-May-2005)Everyone reads usenet. Approval here means approval everywhere.
Post numerous blank posts, or posts containing only a message id.
Post numerous copy&paste web articles from crackerpot websites.
Never forget to call kookologists "k00ks."
If there are several, call them "sockpuppets" too
When all else fails, accuse various and sundry kookologists of e-mailing viruses to you. This is a sure-fire method of garnering sympathy and ensuring that the General Public will always see things your way. An especially effective sub-strategy here is to accuse them of infecting you with the 'Sasser' worm via e-mail.
Quote notorious scientists or writers - it makes it look as if they approve the drivel you are writing!
(9-Jul-05) Anytime your computer is infected with a virus, bogged down by spyware, attacked over your internet connection, or otherwise suffers from preventable problems, government agencies are responsible and are trying to silence you and are monitoring your computer files.
Ignore all traffic signs and feel free to trespass, you don't have to obey any rules.
Scare your enemies with lawsuits, police escorts and whines.
Always back up your empty (albeit noisy) threats with phony LARTs, false police reports, and harassing letters to the FBI and other gubbermint agencies.
Be vigilant in your redundancy. The more you repeat yourself, the more likely others will believe you!
If you can't find anyone as crazy as yourself to support you in the flamewars you start with the normal population, create sock puppets and use anonymous remailers that shamelessly hang on every word you write.
(17-Mar-05) When dealing with law enforcement, remember that it is they who have the problem, not you. Be sure to inform them of this at every available opportunity, as they will surely appreciate your constructive criticism. Be sure to make them aware that YOU KNOW YOUR RIGHTS! ("The cops like that, when people know their rights. That way they don't have to read them to you on the way to the station." - George Carlin)

The more your fake personalities adulate you, the more respect you'll get!
When confronted with a reality that you don't like: Announce loudly that you are departing, never to return as long as there's an Internet. Come back in three or four days and claim you were drunk, hacked, abducted by alience, or forged. Alternately you can just not even mention your prior departure, and if anyone asks you about it, either ignore them or respond with something along the lines of "YOUR NOT THE BOSS OF ME! PLONK!" People really know you mean business then.
Always remain clueproof.
(20-Mar-05) Anyone who does not believe that you are the reincarnation of [$DEITY_OR_PROPHET] is obviously an infidel lacking in faith whose soul in in peril of everlasting damnation.
When responding to one line challenges, post paragraphs of rants and screed in response.
Incoherency is not a roadblock to poasting.
Neither is illiteracy.
Delusions poasted often enough become fact.
Claim you will destroy <insert newsfroup> for attacking you.
When spnaked, send cmsg for Fanboi newsfroup(s).
Find your Lame, Use your Lame, Be your Lame!
Post Edit when the TRVTH hurts.
Always sneck the offending newsfroups.
Always poast pictures of yourself so you can be admired in all your k00ky glory.
Always accuse others of the very acts you are guilty of.
Post lots of boasts about your high IQ and incredible talents.
(20-Mar-05) If you repeat a lie often enough, it becomes the truth. Anybody who fails to understand this is engaged in a deliberate campaign of misinformation and character assassination.
Always <plonk> somebody just before replying the plonkee!
The k00k considers itself the most intelligent person in any conversation, possibly on the planet. Other people are benighted and ignorant, and have been waiting their whole lives for the k00k to rescue them from intellectual darkness.
Write a self-published book and claim it a success. Bonus points for comparing it to "Mein Kampf" and/or the Bible.
Declare yourself equal to a deity of your choice.
Claim that you've come from other planets.
Claim thousands of past lives.
Frothing complaints carry far more weight when you send them from "legal@" some domain.
Nothing strikes terror into the hearts of your detractors more than telling them that you're archiving their messages for possible use in the future.
Never forget that everyone else posting to Usenet is a paid disinformation agent looking to discredit you.

Usenet is governed by US law. If a poster in Romania killfiles you, he's obviously violating your 1st Amendment rights and can be sued.
Every news admin in the world hangs out in NANAU, and they're just dying to nuke the account of that meanyhead who just called you "fucknozzle". Drop 'em a line - that's what they're there for, after all.
AUK will be closed down. Just you wait and see.
They've nuked hundreds of accounts in the name of free speech and yours will be next.
The k00k will, without any trace of irony, lie, manipulate, impersonate, censor, and declare themselves powerful in ways ranging from the ability to have an account shut down to being God Herself, in order to convince people that they are not liars, manipulators, censors, or insane.
Abuse women while telling how many hundreds you've loved. Nevermind that you're one ugly motherfucker and that there were 30,000 femininas that thought you were a scumbag with bad teeth.
Remember that your ko0ky klaims are 'facts', and that 'facts' do not require proof.
Do not neglect to poast your responses to forums that the originator doesn't read. This will make the people in that forum very impressed with how you tear him to shreds without him being able to respond. They like it even better if you are off-topic for that forum.
Keep in mind that lack of evidence supporting your konspiracy theory actually _is_ evidence, of how effective the konspiracy is in hiding.
(06-Oct-05) When spanked, always retreat to the safety of the Ad Hominem.
(04-Aug-2005) When spanked mercilessly for days on end, proving with each poast just what an illiterate and ignorant fool you are, ALWAYS claim ownership of [person(s),froup(s)]. This works on so many levels. It inspires dread in your opponents that they will no longer be able to poast in their home froup and that they will eventually have to pay rent, to name just two.
Any problems with your poasts are the fault of the konspirators, who are trying to stop you from preventing the extinction of humanity.
Konspiracies that are able to subvert whole governments are always unable to silence konspiracy ko0ks.
The entire United States government is willing to spend millions of dollars for the sole purpose of harassing you.
Hollywood is making movies based on your personal life.
Do not consult psychiatrists or other mental health professionals. They are part of the konspiracy, and will sedate you and lock you away and keep you drugged if you tell them the truth.
Numerology and Astrology are respectable sciences and are useful for proving your case.
Everyone is Tim Hill, or David Green, or...
There is a fine line between trolling and kookery. Find that line and cross it repeatedly. When you are killfiled and/or LARTed for net.abuse as a result, claim victory. If you lose multiple accounts, this merely proves that you are indeed a world-class troll, with a black-belt in manipulation.

If you respond to every post someone else makes, they're obsessed. If they respond to less than 1% of your posts, they're even more obsessed.
Publishing people's real names, addresses, and phone numbers when there's no other way for you to come out of a flamewar with any dignity is cool, and proves that you are a master of secret internet information stores, and absolutely not to be fucked with.
Everyone is out to get you. You can put a stop to this by telling everyone that they're out to get you at every available opportunity.
You are the only sane one.
Those that give you a hard time about morally bankrupt things you yourself admit to are just persecutioners of the new inquisition.
Yelling in all caps and cursing at your detractors is debate. Your detractors laughing at you with sarcastic remarks is obvious anger and jealousy.
If doing something results in the loss of your account, legal hassles, or blunt trauma injury, do it again. It always works better the second time.
Asterisks, lots and lots of Asterisks.
Poking holes in kookscreed is stalking, and is a felony.

This evening or this morning, just 10 minutes ago to be precise, Art made one of his trademark suprise announcements on Coast to Coast AM.

Art is back in Pahrump NV!
He's broadcasting from there as I type this.

He's not yet back on ham radio so that may take awhile but it appears that we soon may hear W6OBB back on the ham bands with that BIG loop antenna soon.

Welcome back to the States Art!
We missed ya an hope to hear you on 75M during the wee hours again soon!

Very interesting, as I thought that right after he got married, there were some quotes by Art posted here that his wife "had no interest in coming to the US" and that she "never wanted to come here" [to the US].

If true, an interesting about-face.

Art Bell is a kook - his "young thing" wife, just married him for his money (then, surely locked it in, with having his child), and to gain US citizenship. Don't tell his wife, but Art is having sex with both and the "Greys", and the illegal types.

BWHAHAHA Your life isn't so good, pervert, you live on SS from your dying old man, and you have a shemale wife, you are a morbidly obese fat slob who lives in a filthy house surrounded by a filthy yard, and you have no income, and no way of bettring yourself. You admitted sodomizing 17 year old boys and actively look for them at Myspace .com, and you think nobody else has a better life? BWHAHAHAHAHAHA!
BTW, nobody is going to do anything to Roger.

That's what ended your time in Basic, Markie. Sodomy, not the 2 pounds overweight you claimed, anyways the only two pounds extra you carried is when the guy was in the act of sodomizing you.

Brenda Ann,

IMHO, when a 20 year old girl marries a guy that she's only seen in person for a few weeks, a possibly rich (by Filipino standards) and certainly famous guy, and that guy is old enough to be her GRANDFATHER, I may be cynical, but the phrase "Gold digger" has to cross your mind.

Keeping that phrase in mind, at the time, I was surprised when it was said that she didn't want to come to this country--but she got here soon enough anyway.

However, your weather explanation is interesting and could affect decisions on where to live.

ARRL NEWS. Your editor received the following surprising E-mail from ARRL Membership Services Manager Wayne Mills, N7NG, late Saturday afternoon, December 30th: "On Thursday, December 14, 2006, much to my regret, I delivered a letter of resignation to David Sumner, K1ZZ. Such an early departure had not been my plan but had become necessary. On Friday, in a meeting with Dave and Mr. Harold Kramer, ARRL Chief Operating Officer (COO), I made it clear, when asked, that my resignation was in no way a retirement. I also conveyed that it did not indicate any fundamental differences with ARRL outside of the jurisdiction of Mr. Kramer. I offered them the opportunity to release information about my resignation, but Mr. Kramer could send only a terse two-line message, and then only to the HQ Staff and the closed reflector of the ARRL Officers, Directors and Vice Directors, hence this message.
All in all, it's been a fun six and one-half years. The League has been a great place to work, and I'd do all but the last 22 months over again. I thank all of you around the World for your great support. In particular, I offer special thanks to our volunteers - advisory committee members, log checkers and advisors. I also urge all of you to support the ARRL financially. Be sure to tell them what you want, though - they don't always ask. I hope to regenerate an active interest in Ham Radio back in Wyoming. Maybe there'll be another DXpedition or two as well, and look for N7NG - Jackson Hole - to be an active Wyoming contributor to LoTW as long as it's in business..... 73, Wayne, N7NG Jackson Hole, Wyoming"

PLEASE NOTE: Osten states, "I will only answer DIRECT QSLs with SAE and postage, 2 USDs or one 'new type' IRC. If anything more is included to cover printing costs it's appreciated but of course that is voluntary." If you need/want a "log check", please E-mail Osten at: sm5dqc@areteadsl.se

QSL MANAGER F6FNU. It is being reported on http://www.qslinfo.de by F5CWU that "Antoine, F6FNU, has stopped ALL his management activity !!!!" It is suggested not to send any cards to his address or through the bureau.

VU7, LAKSHADWEEP ISLANDS (VU2LD News).....
* The VU7LD activity went QRT at 1300z on Dec 27th. Reports indicate that the team made about 56,700 QSOs during their operation.

* The following press release is from the VU7LD Web site dated December 27th (edited): "VU7LD PRESS RELEASE - 12: After 27 days of operation, VU7LD went QRT at 1300z on Dec 27th. Stations are being dismantled and operators will be off the island in a couple of days.
We thank the entire Amateur radio community for their support and enthusiasm for this DXpedition as well as the people of Kavaratti who have been extremely helpful to the entire team.

We hope our efforts at raising awareness of Amateur Radio in the region will pay off, with hopefully a club station and a few permanent operators on the island..... 73, de Gopal VU2GMN"

* Online logs are currently available for the entire period of the DXpedition between the period of December 1st and 1300z, December 27th, at the following URL address: http://www.arsi.info/vu7/onlinelog.shtml
If you do not find your callsign in the log and believe you have had a valid QSO please send an E-mail with your detailed log entry including the VU7LD/Operator you worked to: vu7ld@arsi.info
They will do their best to verify if a mistake was made while entering the log. Remember that all direct QSLs go via W3HNK and not the operators of the operation. Some of the operators have been receiving cards directly and these will be dealt with by ARSI and not directly by the ops themselves. QSL via the Bureau is "OK". Any QSL cards received via any IARU recognized QSL Bureau will be answered via their QSL Bureau.
For more details and updates, the ARSI Web page is available at: http://www.arsi.info/vu7/

VU7, LAKSHADWEEP ISLANDS (VU2RG News).....
* The countdown begins for the second VU7 operation. Activity should begin in about two weeks. For up-to-date details, visit the VU7RG Web page at: http://www.vu7.in/

* It was announced this past week that a "Limited Edition QSL" will be issued as a special "thank you" for those valuable supporters. The individual donators will get their QSL card (limited edition) already shipped from the islands (airmail letter) if they make contact (and can be found in the log)!

* It was announced that Toshikazu Kusano, JA1ELY, has joined the team of pilots for the VU7RG operation. They now have 3 pilots. One for each of the IARU zone. They are as follows:
IARU Region 1: Klaus Wagner/DL1XX (Europe, Africa, Middle East and Northern Asia)
IARU Region 2: Donald Greenbaum/N1DG (The Americas)
IARU Region 3: Toshikazu Kusano/JA1ELY (Asia-Pacific)

* UPDATE: Dov, 4Z4DX/M0DOV, who plans to be active from VU7RG on 160m, 80m and RTTY on 17m from January 18-25th, informs OPDX that YT1AD, VA7DX, A61M and himself still have not received their licenses/papers yet. He hopes they will get them soon, as they were promised. Dov states that he has only received a few skeds for the operation. SKEDS ARE WELCOME BEFORE JANUARY 15th via: 4z4dx@iarc.org

WP3, PUERTO RICO. Alfredo, WP3C, will be active in both the CQ WW RTTY WPX Contest (February 10-11th) and ARRL DX CW Contest (February 17-18th) as a Single-Op/All-Band/Low-Power entry. His activity will also count
